INTRODUCTION

Bahia Magdalena in the Pacific Ocean coast of Baja California, Sur. Better known as MAG-BAY is conformed by more than 150 nautical miles of bays, coves and flats, the vast quantity and variety of mangroves contribute to a great inshore fishing experience with many species, such as snook, snapper, cabrilla, etc.

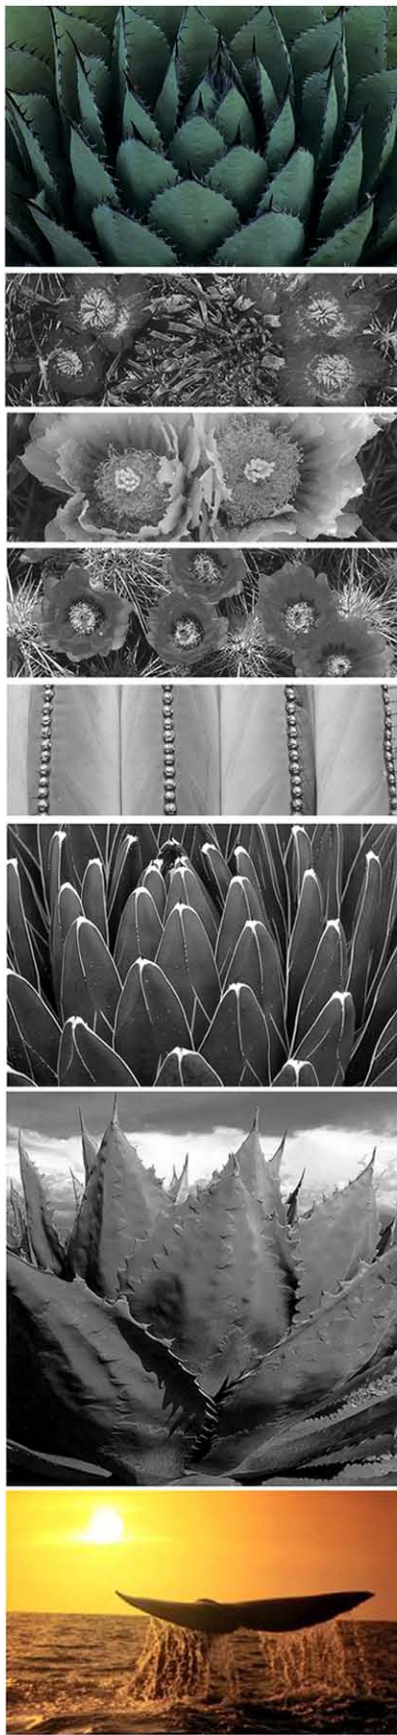

The chains of islands that conform the bay to the west make the sea and wind calm with enormous touristic potential. Marlin fishing, as is with inshore, is considered by experts as the best in the world, when water temperature and natural conditions change and marlin migrate, other important species arrive such as tuna, wahoo, dolphin, etc.

Due to natural conditions, shallow water, temperature and the great amounts of bait, every winter thousands of whales arrive to MAG-BAY to complete their biological reproductive circle. The show this is brings hundreds of tourists and scholars from January to March.
