LETTER FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Friends,

As we face a global economic recession and right-wing resurgence, the worldwide euphoria surrounding the historic election of President Obama seems distant, a stark reminder that no one election or law can transform society. Deep, transformative change takes the sustained efforts of large groups of people who undergird legal and policy advances with cultural change work.

Astraea grantee partners are taking the lead, orchestrating victories in human rights law, artistic freedom and self-determination; and providing solace and solutions to those living in isolation, fear or poverty. They are forging coalitions across movements and issues, and employing multiple strategies to tackle entrenched problems. Poignant examples of these efforts are the U.S. Movement-Building Initiative, the Social Change Opportunity Fund and the grantee partner highlights featured within these pages.

In the fields of social justice and feminist philanthropy, Astraea has played a leadership role in positive shifts. There are more institutional and individual donors supporting LGBTI issues than ever before. Though more is needed, available resources have increased for lesbian, trans and LGBTI people of color organizations that incorporate critical gender, racial and economic justice issues in their work.

So that these organizations have the stability to strategize for the long term, Astraea is making larger grants and has more than doubled the number of multi-year grants. We are strengthening a global movement by convening our grantee partners and collaborating with the Latin American Consortium of Women’s Funds (a region-wide initiative) and Funders for LGBTQ Issues in its nationwide racial equity initiative. Astraea staff members have traveled the globe from Barcelona to Detroit to promote LGBTI human rights and intersectional politics.

Serving as the Executive Director of Astraea has been an extraordinary privilege. As I transition from my current role, I am heartened by the knowledge that Astraea is in the hands of a wonderfully diverse and talented board and staff. They and the countless donors, grantees and colleagues around the world reflected in this annual report are a constant inspiration. Your commitment, courage and love truly embody “Justice in the Making.”

In Peace,

Katherine T. Acey
Executive Director

LETTER FROM THE BOARD CHAIR

Dear Friends,

It is with a great deal of pride that I share this annual report with you. This past year, Astraea distributed more than $1.7 million in grants to 146 organizations and individuals in 40 countries around the world. I’d like to thank our wonderful staff and the continued generosity of our steadfast supporters, who have ensured Astraea’s financial stability and made the programming central to Astraea’s mission possible.

In the coming year, there is much to build upon and more to be done. Our staff and board share an unwavering commitment to work for social justice and human rights around the globe in partnership with our donors, grantees and colleagues.

Sadly, the time has come to mark the transition of our dear friend and colleague Katherine Acey, who is leaving her post as Executive Director after 23 years. While there is little hope of adequately describing Katherine’s contributions here, nor our appreciation, I do want to share a few words.

Katherine has led Astraea in the social-justice-feminist funding movement with vision and resolve. Hired as Astraea’s first staff member in 1987, she led the foundation to international prominence as an outspoken advocate of intersectional politics; LGBTI human rights; and gender, racial and economic justice. Her creative and inclusive vision has been instrumental in setting a standard for a more progressive, diverse and community-based definition of philanthropy.

As we look toward the future, we remain focused on ensuring Astraea’s strength and resilience, which would not be possible without you. On behalf of the board and staff, I offer our deepest thanks. We are humbled by your generosity and move forward with a complete belief in our collective ability to bring a more just world into being.

Sincerely,

Mary Li
Chair, Board of Directors

FUNDING CHANGE AND STRENGTHENING COMMUNITIES AROUND THE WORLD

Astraea Lesbian Foundation for Justice is the only foundation in the world solely dedicated to supporting LGBTI organizations worldwide. A feminist-social-justice hub, Astraea works side by side with grantee and donor partners for transformative and lasting social, racial, economic and gender justice.

ASTRAEA RECOGNIZES AND CULTIVATES LEADERSHIP GLOBALLY. On nearly every continent and often at great personal risk, Astraea grantee partners are seizing opportunities, challenging injustice and paving the way for all people to live freely and safely. To bolster that leadership, Astraea is often the first line of institutional support to emerging organizations and provides multi-year support to long-term partners.

ASTRAEA HARNESSES THE COLLECTIVE POWER OF PEOPLE WORKING TOGETHER. We link grantee partners to share strategies, cement alliances and collaborate to launch new initiatives. We support collaborative models and transnational networks and help create them. We pool the resources of our donor partners to fuel substantial and sustainable change.

ASTRAEA IS CHANGING THE FACE OF PHILANTHROPY. Our philosophy is based on the conviction that all people can participate in philanthropy. Astraea partners with donors to cultivate active, informed change agents. We also leverage our expertise to expand the network of institutional donors supporting LGBTI human rights.

MISSION

The Astraea Lesbian Foundation for Justice works for social, racial, economic and gender justice in the U.S. and internationally. Our grantmaking and philanthropic advocacy programs help lesbians and allied communities challenge oppression and claim their human rights.

IN THE FACE OF PROFOUND CHALLENGES, AND OFTEN AT GREAT PERSONAL RISK, ASTRAEA GRANTEE PARTNERS ARE LEADING A GLOBAL MOVEMENT FOR HUMAN RIGHTS AND SAFE, AFFIRMING AND LIBERATING SOCIETIES FOR ALL PEOPLE.

In fiscal year 2010, Astraea granted more than $1.7 million to 146 organizations and individuals in 79 cities in 40 countries around the world.

WE BUILD MOVEMENTS FOR TRANSFORMATIVE CHANGE. Astraea supports activists to build strategic and sustainable alliances over the long term through convenings, multi-year grants and ongoing technical support. Because transformative change happens gradually, we more than doubled the number of multi-year grants. Astraea also connects grantee partners to facilitate skills exchange, political dialogue and strategy development so that movements are visible and poised for collective action. This past year, we provided timely funds for collaborative efforts around the globe and held the fourth U.S. Movement-Building Convening in Knoxville, Tennessee (see pages 14–15 for highlight).

COMMUNITIES FACING A MULTITUDE OF ISSUES MUST BE PRIMARY, NOT PERIPHERAL. They are best positioned to be engines for transformative change. Astraea prioritizes funding for lesbian and trans communities of color and antiracist allies. We also started the first institutional fund in the U.S. for LGBTI organizations worldwide, with a focus on the Global South and East. Since 1996, we have invested in the work of thousands of activists in more than 70 countries.

WORK FOR TRANSFORMATIVE CHANGE MUST TACKLE MULTIPLE ISSUES AND EMPLOY MULTIPLE STRATEGIES. From country to country, community to community, an array of strategies are needed to capture minds and hearts.

• Activists in Hong Kong are continuing their media productions after fending off both the broadcasting commission and the police’s efforts to shut them down.

• Collaborative human rights advocacy work of activists from 17 Latin American countries propelled the Organization of American States to approve a resolution calling on member states to take measures against discrimination based on sexual orientation or gender identity.

• In the western U.S., activists made their LGBTI-inclusion curriculum for racial justice organizations available to a wider audience by publishing a Spanish translation.

• Activists in New York circumvented the criminal justice system’s criminalization of communities of color by working with local businesses and churches to create official LGBTI safe-spaces and community responses to violence.

Astraea programs build, link and amplify the collective resources, power and knowledge of our communities to achieve institutional and cultural change around the globe. Visit astraeafoundation.org/AR2010 for a complete list of grantee partners and the range of ways they are making change.

Esperanza Peace and Justice Center
(San Antonio, TX)
Esperanza organizes progressive communities in conservative San Antonio. When developers began tearing down historic buildings in a low-income Latino neighborhood, the group launched a public art campaign and revitalized doomed buildings, preserving culture and community. As people of different ages, backgrounds and sexualities come together to reach common goals, the group brings hidden connections to light and fosters a radical acceptance of LGBTI people.
Lasting social and political change are built over many years, with the growing involvement of thousands who together make up a movement. Astraea’s U.S. Movement Building Initiative set out to build the capacity of lesbian- and trans-led people of color organizations at the forefront of change, to propel such a movement for social, racial, economic and gender justice in the U.S.—both within and beyond LGBTI communities.

Astraea has invested more than $3 million over the past four years in multi-year grants, providing consistent, long-term support that has built organizational and political capacity, linked activists across issues and regions, and amplified the voices and leadership of LGBTI people of color and allies. Astraea has also held four annual convenings to provide a crucial space for activists to deepen relationships, share knowledge and plan joint strategy work.

THE HIGHLANDER CONVENING AND THE BIRTH OF THE ROOTS COALITION

Long before Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on the bus in 1955, the Montgomery Bus Boycott was planned at the Highlander Center in Knoxville, Tennessee, which had been steadily training activists in community schools for fifteen years to lay the groundwork for the civil rights movement. Fifty-five years later at Highlander, in May 2010, a new national movement began to emerge during Astraea’s fourth convening when the Roots Coalition: LGBTQ Liberation Strategies was born. Twelve grantee partners and two specially invited collectives cemented alliances built over four years of collaborative work and formed the Coalition to tackle an ambitious national agenda. They fleshed out a community schools curriculum to build a strong base that could be mobilized quickly. They also laid out a national policy platform, rooted in the combined aspirations of hundreds of their members, to address immigration, and racial and economic justice.

“The Roots Coalition represents something we have dreamed of for so long—a true returning to the roots of Stonewall—a politic of people of color and LGBTQ-led work that is about liberation.”

—Caitlin Breedlove, Southerners on New Ground (Atlanta, GA)

BUILDING MOMENTUM AT THE U.S. SOCIAL FORUM

The second U.S. Social Forum (USSF) was held in June 2010 in Detroit, Michigan, and was identified as a critical opportunity to build momentum. The Roots Coalition designed and facilitated the only Queer and Trans People’s Movement Assembly (PMA)—a democratic process used to identify issues and draft national resolutions. Equipped with their proposed policy platform that was solidified at Astraea’s convening, the Coalition garnered support, further identified pressing Launching a bold, multi-strategy campaign to ignite national change issues for LGBTI people from health care to employment, and produced a shared resolution. By the end of the four days at the USSF, more than 500 people had contributed to the Queer and Trans People’s Resolution for the Safe Self-Determination of Our People. The resolution was included in the Detroit People’s Movement Agenda and was adopted by all 15,000 activists at the closing ceremonies.

LAUNCHING A MOVEMENT

With Astraea’s support, the voices of many are being amplified and LGBTI people of color–led and multiracial organizations are taking the lead. The Coalition is on course to launch a bold, multi-strategy campaign that will affect policy initiatives, establish community schools, and build the people power necessary to ignite change. This work calls to mind Astraea’s spiral logo, as lasting social change is propelled forward, person to person, community to community, continent to continent.

Astraea’s Social Change Opportunity Fund (SCOF) provides multi-year support to grantee partners with impressive track records of implementing timely institutional change initiatives in their countries. Established in 2002 with generous donor support, SCOF has awarded more than $2.5 million in multi-year grants to propel transformational change around the globe. Forty-one long-term Astraea grantee partners in 30 countries across Africa, Asia/Pacific, the Caribbean, Eastern Europe/Commonwealth of Independent States, Latin America and the Middle East have received SCOF support. This past year, Astraea made six institutional change grants totalling $330,000 to LGBTI human rights organizations. They join six others currently receiving SCOF multi-year grants.

SCOF grantee partners launch bold campaigns to counter a range of challenges, from fundamentalist religious forces to discriminatory colonial law to oppressive governments. These activists push forward, despite great personal risk and financial and social pressure, to alter the beliefs, policies, programs and behaviors of institutions, such as governments, major corporations and the media. With time, they have expanded their constituencies and built alliances with other social movements. They have supported policy struggles with cultural change work, and as a result, same-sex couples in Colombia won legal recognition of their relationships, and trans people in Peru succeeded in petitioning government and international bodies to uphold their human rights. SCOF recipients have also achieved these victories:

- Kampania Przeciw Homofobii (KPH) (Warsaw, Poland) won international support when the United Nations European Commission included KPH’s report on LGBT human rights abuses in its human rights review of the Polish government.
- Helen (Beirut, Lebanon) gained momentum in the campaign to decriminalize homosexuality when the Lebanese Ministry of Health ranked the group’s HIV/AIDS center number one.
- Behind the Mask (Johannesburg, South Africa) held a community journalism training and launched a translation of their web publication to French, to reach LGBTI organizations in francophone countries operating underground for fear of repression.
- Creating Resources for Empowerment and Action (New Delhi, India) is part of the Voices Against 377 coalition, a petitioner in the case at the Delhi High Court that decriminalized homosexuality in India.

“Thanks to Astraea’s support, we have reached important social and political heights, such as in the Organization of American States, the United Nations and in our country. We will forever be grateful to the Astraea family.”

—Martha Miravete Cicero, Grupo de Mujeres de la Argentina

Since change happens gradually, not over a single year and not necessarily around a single issue, SCOF multi-year grants allow these brave and visionary organizations to plot a course to victory over the long term. They are seizing the opportunity, defying obstacles and building movements one person, one connection, one year at a time.

DONOR PROFILE: Dipti Ghosh

“What makes Astraea special is its inclusivity; Astraea reaches where most community foundations don’t.” —Dipti Ghosh, Astraea Donor Partner

Dipti Ghosh’s dedication to women’s and LGBTI issues has been a central theme in her life ever since she organized Take Back the Night rallies in response to acts of violence on her college campus. Her work as an organizer led to her involvement with Astraea, and she served on Astraea’s International Grants Panel in the late nineties. Dipti has been a passionate Astraea supporter for over a decade and maintains that “What makes Astraea special is its inclusivity; Astraea reaches where most community foundations don’t.” She has personal experience with this support as a founding board member of Trikone, an LGBT South Asian community organization in the Bay Area. Astraea was one of Trikone’s first supporters, and Dipti credits Astraea with helping the group develop into the organization it is today. As an Astraea donor, Dipti is committed to helping to make that support possible. “I have to be involved in my community to help get us where we need to be. I give to be part of the change.” Besides being an ardent Astraea supporter, Dipti Ghosh lives a full life in San Francisco, California, as a financial advisor with her partner of 15 years.

Katherine has acted as the conscience of our movement. She has frankly and respectfully made certain that we are always mindful of how we all have a key stake in dismantling oppression and committing to a vision of true justice.

—Kate Kendell, Executive Director of the National Center for Lesbian Rights
HONORING KATHERINE ACEY

KATHERINE ACEY IS A BELOVED, EXCEPTIONAL LEADER. A visionary in both philanthropy and grantmaking, she is regarded as an expert in the social-justice-feminist funding movement. Under her stewardship of 23 years as Executive Director, Astraea has experienced tremendous growth. The Foundation’s grants programs expanded in focus from regional to national to global. Astraea established the nation’s first fund for lesbian writers in 1991 and, in 2002, the first fund for lesbian visual artists. In 1996, Astraea started the first international fund in the U.S. dedicated to supporting LGBTI communities worldwide. Astraea’s U.S. Movement-Building Initiative, begun in 2006, provides multi-year financial and structural support to LGBTI people of color–led organizations and supports collaboration for social change.

A fierce advocate of building bridges between people and communities, Katherine has overseen successful initiatives to bring donors and grantees together. During her tenure, Katherine’s philanthropic advocacy has played an instrumental role in increasing support for the lives and work of LGBTI people around the globe.

The Acey Fund
Astraea has established the Acey Fund as a vehicle to honor and continue Katherine’s legacy with a focus on social-justice-feminist movement building, intersectional analysis, and gender, racial and economic justice. To make a gift, call 212-529-8021 x814, or visit astraeafoundation.org/AceyFund.
