

Though we have made the city home
we search for peace in the country;
 how strange we are.
What is the point
of looking for shade with an axe in hand?