

Communities aren't just concrete and steel, asphalt and glass.

They are also a state of mind: an aria, a pas de deux, an epiphany in a gallery. For a foundation whose mission it is to help build informed and engaged communities, the arts provide a powerful force for creating the common experiences that engage and inspire us.

That's why the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation launched the Knight Arts Challenge in Philadelphia, investing $9 million for programs that help weave the arts into people's everyday lives.

We're proud the Barnes Foundation was one of the first Knight Arts Challenge winners. With Knight support, the Barnes will expand the reach of its world-class art collection by creating a digital application, or app, and a printed guide that highlight and contextualize works.

Everyday, challenge winners like the Barnes are engaging Philadelphia's residents and neighborhoods through the arts. Find out more at KnightArts.org.
