

A long-time supporter of the Barnes Foundation, Wells Fargo is proud to be an inaugural year program sponsor of the Barnes in Philadelphia as well as the sponsor of First Fridays, a series of performances, screenings, tours and lectures that is sure to be one of the most popular offerings at the new Barnes campus.

About Wells Fargo

Recently recognized by the Philadelphia Business Journal as Greater Philadelphia's #1 philanthropic company, Wells Fargo is committed to being active in our communities to help address the social, economic, and environmental issues facing our customers and team members. We continue to work hand-in-hand with nonprofits, focusing on building strategic relationships with them through donations, affordable financing and volunteerism to support their goals.

In 2011, we invested more than $213 million in 19,000 non-profit organizations across the United States, a figure that included almost $15 million in contributions support for arts and culture events and organizations. Locally, in addition to the Barnes Foundation, Wells Fargo is proud to support some of greater Philadelphia's most revered cultural institutions including the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Philadelphia Orchestra, as well as the Marian Anderson Award and dozens of regional and community programs for the arts.

In addition to our support of arts and culture, the company also provides financial support to hundreds of greater Philadelphia's civic, community development, education, environmental and human services nonprofits including the United Way of Southeastern Pennsylvania, the Salvation Army, People's Emergency Center, and many others.

Every day, more than 6,000 Wells Fargo team members come to work in greater Philadelphia. We are part of this community and we encourage our team members to be good neighbors and get actively involved in projects that inspire them personally. Last year our team members donated more than 1.5 million hours of their time nationwide to volunteer with non-profit organizations. Locally, you will see Wells Fargo team members at Habitat For Humanity builds, reading to schoolchildren through our Reading First initiative, teaching financial literacy through our Hands on Banking program, or helping beautify the City of Philadelphia through the Wells Fargo sponsored TreePhilly program.

Our contributions and volunteer initiatives are all part of Wells Fargo's overall commitment to corporate social responsibility—operating our business in a way that helps our customers succeed financially, and that creates long-term economic growth and a better quality of life for everyone in the communities we serve. It's a vision that guides every decision we make. To learn more about Wells Fargo, visit wellsfargo.com
