Academic Regalia

As early as the twelfth century, the first modern universities, at Bologna and Paris, were the centers of European learning. The usual garb of the time, for both churchmen and laymen was a long gown necessary for warmth in the unheated buildings of the day. Scholars, generally members of the church orders, wore robes as well as hoods to protect their shaved heads. The academic hat was a later development adapted from the headdress of ordinary people. The flat, square mortarboard of today originated in Oxford, England. Academic costume came to America in 1754 with the founding of King's College, now Columbia University. Styles became quite varied, as they were in Europe, but eventually several groups developed codes and the latest revision for the American Council on Education in 1960 is currently used.

The Cap: The mortarboard cap, worn flat on the head, with one corner of the square facing forward, has a tassel which may either be black, or the color assigned to the field of study. Doctors in all fields may wear a tassel of metallic gold.

The Gown: Most gowns are black. The cut of the gown indicated the wearer's degree. The bachelor's gown is simple with long pointed sleeves. The doctor's robe is ornamented with three bars on each sleeve and panels on the front of the robe.

The Hood: The institution which awarded the degree and the field of study in which the degree was earned. These colors include:
