It doesn't matter what planet they're from. Everyone deserves to be punished. Rider src This earlier life at Frank Castle seems to reflect the Frank Castle of the Prime Marvel universe. [2] [5] Thanos wins earth's last against Thanos during the heroes of the pedestal The judge was hit in the head by the wreckage of the building to which the Hulk was thrown and who died, and his soul was later sent to hell. The judge was willing to give anything to punish Thanos for slaughtering his planet, and he signed a demonic contract with Mephisto and became the latest Ghost Rider. By the time he returned to Earth, Thanos was gone and everything on the planet was dead. The ghost rider spent the next countless years alone, wandering endlessly and immortalized with anyone to kill or love. When even Mephisto fell silent on his phone calls, he began to lose his mind. [2] When the badly injured Galactus arrived on Earth for help against Thanos, unaware that he had already killed earth's population, the Ghost Rider offered him a dead planet in exchange for the possibility of punishing Mad Titan as his messenger. An offer accepted by the Great Devour. Together, they roamed the cosmos to halt Thanos' systematic destruction of every living being, which led to them become legends. Their story lasted for centuries, but ended when they finally encountered Thanos, who bet Galactus as he approached the battle. Thanos offered the immortal Rider the opportunity to see more evil than he could punish in a thousand lives, thus becoming his servant. [2] At the behest of King Thanos, the Rider used The Timestone to draw the younger Thanos into the future[4] so that he could help his older self overcome the love of death by killing The Fallen, the one who managed to escape him. Unbeknownst to the rider, King Thanos didn't need his younger anyone to kill the fallen. He needed her to kill himself to finally be by death's side. [7] After the Fallen used Mjolnir to smash the Rider to pieces,[8] time-shifted Thanos realized the true motives of his parent self and proceeded to prevent this future from ever happening. [7] Baby Thanos Must Die Frank was retrieved from his dead timeline with the help of alternative reality Odin[5] and rewarded with Valhalla,[9], but he did not other residents. Because Frank didn't want to be there, Odin returned his strength to him and offered to send him. Him. The time and place he wanted. Frank decided to do so once he had been able to get to know Frank's memories. As the watcher testified, an angry Frank vowed to raise Thanos alone, creating a timeline in which Thanos grew into something worse. The Guardians of the Galaxy of said timeline tried to turn its future into the best by killing Thanos, but Frank (and later baby Thanos) killed them all. They were later greeted by Thanos' future me, who wore the same clothes Frank wore as the Judge. [10] The future Thanos showed Frank the authoritarian world he had built on his example, including an earlier version of himself living with his wife Maria. Realizing the consequences of his interference in his life, Frank killed the future Thanos and put his baby back in the past, wiping out an alternate timeline. Death came before Frank to confirm that his actions had, however, got stuck in baby Thanos' bloodlust, which would make him his agent. [11] Destroying history Frank spent the next few years on earth, mesmaning into the lives of his heroes until he tried to save his own family from their deaths. Uatu intervened, put history to the right and used Infinity Gauntlet to make everyone - including Frank himself - forget what he did. He spent years imprisoned on a ferry until he put his memories together and was freed through Edu's indirect intervention. Frank also claimed to have killed The Watcher later when confronted by Nick Fury after the fort robbery. [12] Last challenge Some time after that, Frank sensed Thanos' death at the hands of his daughter Gamora. Shortly after his beheading, Eros approached him, who had come for it and his brother's desire. [13] He was present when Eros gathered to show Thanos' desire, revealing that he had placed his consciousness in another living being before his death. As the assembled discussed what to do with this new information, the black order attacked them and was absorbed into the black hole. Frank was rescued thanks to Beta Ray Bill and recruited by Peter Quill to protect the Galaxy. [14] After an quarrand with Groot and Bill, he left the group and joined the Dark Monitors in his quest to pursue Gamora as the most likely host of Thanos' resurrection. [15] They tracked him down using his former lover Nova. I ran into the guardians of the galaxy to take him. [16] When they were ready to execute him, they were attacked by the Asgardian goddess Hela and the Black Order. Hela easily brought down Frank by using his power over the dead creatures, leaving him with a flaming skeleton. Hela then revealed that Starfox had been a vessel chosen by Thanos all along. Thanos' consciousness was reinforced at Starfox, and he left with Hela and order. [17] Frank was also forced to come with Hela. After Guardians and Dark Guardians attacked Knowhere to stop Thanos' resurrection, Hela was knocked off the platform, causing her control over Frank to weaken. Frank was attacked by the star lord, but Frank was in no fighting shape and told the Star Lord that without Hela's power, he could no longer hold himself together and eventually collapsed into a pile of bones. Frank was transported to hell, where his ruler, Johnny Blaze, greeted him. [18] Ghost Riders Blaze's challenge later forced Frank to possess Mount Avengers and attack the Avengers as they tried to exorcinc Robbie Reyes. [19] Revenge of a cosmic ghost rider Leaving the country behind Frank traveled the cosmos to punish the villains for their sin. This got him into trouble with the Shi'ar Empire and was defeated by the Imperial Guard. Because of his crimes, Frank was sent to an alien prison located on an asteroid run by Shiites. When the other prisoners started beating him, he turned into a cosmic ghost rider and started killing them. However, this freed the mysterious creature captured there, draining the Rider of his power, leaving him with only a skull. Due to the danger posed by the creature, one of the guards activated the prison's self-destruct program, destroying the prison and apparently the creature as well. Months later, some space pirates arrived and rescued the remains of the prison and its prisoners, including the Rider's skull. Then Frank woke up and killed every crew member to rebuild his own body until only Camille Benally was left. After destroying the entire ship, he used Penance Stare on the girl, but found out he was innocent. [20] The duo fought various criminals throughout the universe, and in the end they clashed with the cosmic king who threw Cam into the wormhole. [21] Outraged, the cosmic ghost rider tried in vain to destroy the cosmic king because he proved too powerful. When the Rider gained the upper hand, the cosmic king offered Frank's long-lost soul, which the king had stolen from Mephisto, back to him. Frank accepted the offer and killed the cosmic king. When Cammi arrived, having travelled briefly in time because of the wormhole, she revealed that the cosmic king was in fact possessed by an ancient space demon parasites who originally wanted Frank because it was the same. Same. Frank was accidentally released from Shi'ari Prison. Mephisto Frank's home reality arrived shortly afterwards, wanting to retrieve the soul he rightly owns. Since Frank had already redeemed his soul, he demanded The Soul of Cmm. [23] As he fought his way through hell, Frank finally returned to the Hotel Inferno and encountered mephisto from the Prime Marvel universe. Mephisto refused to give Cammi's soul back, but offered a deal to trade it for Frank's soul. He accepted, became a cosmic ghost rider again, this time in his service to Mephisto of the Prime Marvel universe, and revived Camm. Unfortunately, the ancient alien parasite that had possessed the cosmic king immediately invaded Camm and turned him into his next host. The demon then drained Frank's powers once again, forcing him to drain a different Brood life force to rebuild himself months later so he could begin his quest to free Cammi one more time. [24] Powers Spirit of Vengeance: As a ghost rider, Castle has the following powers: Hellfire Manipulation: Like all Ghost Riders, Castle is able to manipulate and project hellfire, as well as infuto objects and vehicles with it. [4] He has demonstrated his ability to unleash omniscient explosions of hell fire that burn almost everything around him. [2] Superhuman Power[25] Superhuman Endurance[4] Staring at Repentance[6] Immortality: Being the Spirit of Vengeance makes the Rider immortal. He's lived for millions of years and he hasn't aged at all. [4] The only way to die is to cause a strong enough injury. [8] Meta Possession: As a cosmic ghost rider, Frank has the ability to stretch the natural capacity of essential entities to unprecedented limits. After possessing the entire mountain of Avengers and taking over its numerous facilities. [19] Distant possession: When he shadowed the Bull's Heavenly Carcass, the cosmically charged Ghost Rider could own other things through its ghostly tendencies. Like iron man armor in the armory. [19] Power Cosmic: Like all other Galactius Heralds before him, the Rider uses Voimakosm. Presumably all his physical abilities have improved; The extent to which it has not been revealed. So far, the extras he has demonstrated so far are: Interstellar Travel: The Rider is able to travel interstellar distances through its Hell cycle. [4] [2] Energy projection: A rider can shoot devastating explosions of cosmic energy from his hands. [25] Cosmic penance stare: By infusing his penance stare at Power Cosmic, the Rider can burn any sinner he uses it against, regardless of whether the said sinner feels remorse or not. [25] Telekinesia: Castle showed strong telekinesia by dismantling an entire [20] Abilities that seem to be prime judge abilities. Abilities. Universe. [2] Weapons manufacturing: Castle still had the ability to create weapons from all the mundane pieces of technology, such as the manufacture of a weapon made from pieces of Tony's armor. [26] Weaknesses Mental health problems: The countless years the Rider had spent on Earth alone had caused him serious mental health problems. [2] Necromanticism: Since the Rider is technically dead, any being who controls the dead, such as the deity of death, can rule him as well. [12] Equipment punisher's Suit[5] Transport Hell Cycle Weapons Ghost Rider's Chain. Chains forged from Sytorak bones that are practically indestructible, even if even an thanos spirit couldn't break them. [4] Chains can also be used as whips. Combined with the rider's superpower, they are able to tear up opponents. [27] A couple of fireads. [4] Cosmic Ghost Rider is based on DC Comics Lobo. Ironically, Lobo himself was inspired by the Judge. [29] Search and Discuss search this site: Frank Castle (Earth-TRN666) (Earth-TRN666)
