

CONTENTS

Preface	vi
1 What makes plants tick?	1
Stupid plants	2
Heard it on the grapevine	9
Touchy subject	12
Breath of fresh air	15
Nature by numbers	19
It's flowering time	23
Hungry leaves	28
The burning question	31
True blue	34
Boom and bust	39
2 Plants from elsewhere	43
Drifting on ancient currents	45
Exotic plants face a prickly reception	49
First Australian plants	54
Browned off	58
Bad blood	62
Boab dreaming	70
Palm gods from the north	75
Handful of beans	79
The weed-erness	82
What if weeds?	90

3	Garden plants and landscapes	96
	Guiltfree planting	99
	Immortal plants don't live forever	104
	Tree branches ahead	110
	Killing a tree makes room for more life	114
	The multicultural garden	118
	Patriotism in the Victorian garden	122
	Top five 'first' botanic gardens	127
	For pleasure and ornament	135
	Gardening in a post-modern world	140
4	Gardening with convictions	145
	Converted to seaweed	146
	Synthetic or organic, but minimise harm	151
	Uncompanionable planting	156
	Over your dead body	159
	Glyphosate, punished for the sins of its inventors?	162
	Commodified genes or just more of the same?	165
	Wood-wide web unravels	169
	Rhizosphere revealed	174
	The Moon factor	178
5	Observing and cataloguing nature	183
	Blood may flow over the wattle	184
	You say boab, I say that's OK	191
	New species are where you find them	196
	Enjoy nature kids, but keep your gadget handy	200
	I accept extinction, reluctantly	205
	Eager for spring in London	208

Contents

Australia should scrap the four seasons	213
It is time to ditch Victoria's floral emblem	218
Decolonising nomenclature	222
Giving a rat's about trees	227
Botany on road to extinction	230
Let's sing the praises of taxonomists	233
Epilogue	238
Acknowledgements	242
Endnotes	243