Kansas State Head Coach Brad Hill

On the Game:

"It has been a gutsy effort for the last three weeks and a gutsy effort by our kids. Our backs have been against the wall and I think that we talk about whenever we have had to have a win that's when it's to get ourselves in the Big 12 championship or like tonight, we get to play tomorrow. We were able to come through with a win. So hopefully that comes through tomorrow."

On starting pitcher in Championship game:

"It will probably be A.J. Morris tomorrow and obviously we will see how it goes. We are obviously going to have to pitch a number of people in different roles and situations and try to get through it. That is what people have already done today and we had to do that some tonight, too."

On possible NCAA tournament berth:

"It would be a great thing, a tremendous thing. It is something that has been a goal of ours and that is something that has been a recruiting tool of ours, getting to a regional or beyond."
