

Since our launch in April 2024, we have...

100+ pairs

donated over 100 pairs to disadvantaged girls.

donated pants to orphaned girls in a small Malawi village so they don't have to hide in their huts during their period.

educated young girls in PHSE lessons at schools including St Joseph's School in Bracknell, UK, about the importance of switching to period pants.

gifted several pairs to endometriosis communities in the UK.

sponsored an under-8 girls football team & cheered them on as they won their Cup Final.

By the end of 2024, we will have educated many more schools and organisations about the importance of switching to period pants.

At Annahitah, giving back is at the heart of what we do. We commit 5% of our time to pro bono services.

We're dedicated to educating mothers of pre-adolescent and teenage girls about period hygiene. By passing on this knowledge, we empower the next generation to make eco-conscious choices, reducing toxic chemicals and plastic waste throughout their lives.

We take our mission further by visiting local schools to educate girls transitioning into womanhood on sustainable, non-toxic options. Plus, we're committed to supporting disadvantaged females by donating pants every single month.
