

DISCLOSURE MATERIALS

Certified B Corporations must complete a Disclosure Questionnaire to identify potentially sensitive issues related to the company (e.g. historical fines, sanctions, material litigation, or sensitive industry practices).

This component does not affect the company's score on the B Impact Assessment. If the company answers affirmatively to any items in the Disclosure Questionnaire and B Lab deems them to be material, the company must:

- 1) Be transparent about the disclosure issues identified on the company's public B Impact Report
- 2) Describe how the company has addressed this issue.
- 3) Demonstrate that management systems are in place to avoid similar issues from arising in the future.

In all cases, the Standards Advisory council reserves the right to refuse certification if the company is ultimately deemed not to uphold the spirit of the community.

In addition to the voluntary indication of sensitive issues in the Disclosure Questionnaire, companies pursuing Certification also are subject to background checks by B Lab staff. Background checks include a review of public records, news sources, and search engines for company names, brands, executives/founders, and other relevant topics.

Sensitive issues identified through background checks may or may not be within the scope of questions in the Disclosure Questionnaire, but undergo the same review process and are subject to the same possible review by the Standards Advisory Council, including ineligibility for B Corp Certification, required remediation, or disclosure.

This document contains a copy of the company's completed Disclosure Questionnaire and related disclosure documentation provided by the company.

B Corp Certification - Disclosure Questionnaire Documentation

PROVIDED BY: New England Biolabs, Inc. UPDATED AS OF: 04/22/2020

DISCLOSURE QUESTIONNAIRE CATEGORY	Disclosure Industries
TOPIC	Genetically Modified Organisms
SUMMARY OF ISSUE	New England Biolabs manufactures and sells recombinant enzymes that are used to perform DNA research and advance the life science industry. The U.S. scientific community shares general consensus that the body of current research lacks sufficient evidence to indicate the consumption of GM food results in direct negative human health effects. Amongst other counter-arguments, GMO critics argue that while short-term studies may not indicate negative effects, more longitudinal research is needed to understand whether GMOs pose any potential negative health effects for humans. Most arguments against use of GMOs in food supply adhere to the precautionary principle calling for more research into the possible harm on humans and/or the environment. This philosophy drives certain initiatives, such as the Non-GMO Project, which call for greater transparency and labelling requirements to empower consumers with the ability to choose between GMO or Non-GMO Verified food products. The most prominent ethical concern is the use of CRISPR Cas9 techniques to modify the DNA of an organism to perform gene editing on humans. New England Biolabs is not in favor of doing human gene editing and does not sell to labs that work on those types of projects.
SIZE/SCOPE OF ISSUE (e.g. $ financial implication, # of individuals affected)	The company earns 1% of revenues from the sale of products related to the use of GMOs and genetic modification.
IMPLEMENTED MGT PRACTICES	New England Biolabs has position statements and is developing an ethics page for the company website. Additionally, the company screens customers for potential misuse of products or a history of "misuse" of products. All the products that NEB sells are labeled as "Research Use Only" (RUO). This is an important distinction in the biotech world and the RUO label conveys to a customer that if they want to use the products for a diagnostic kit, for example, then the customer will have to perform testing to qualify the material to be used for their purpose (under FDA regulations).
OTHER MANAGEMENT COMMENTS	Additionally, with respect to GMOs, New England Biolabs agrees with B Lab's references to the Sustainable Development Goals that were articulated by the UN. NEB fully supports the importance of maintaining genetic diversity and promoting fair and equitable sharing of the benefits arising from the utilization of genetic resources.
