2020 BMW Championship Raises $800,000 for Evans Scholars Foundation.

Glenview, Ill. - December 17, 2020... Western Golf Association officials announced that the 2020 BMW Championship hosted at Olympia Fields Country Club in Olympia Fields, Illinois, raised more than $800,000 for caddie scholarships despite the absence of spectators due to COVID-19. Since 2007, the BMW Championship has contributed $36 million to help provide full-tuition and housing scholarships for more than 3,000 deserving caddies.

“During this season of giving, we’re proud to announce the contribution of all proceeds from the BMW Championship to the Evans Scholars Foundation, a deserving cause,” said Vince Pellegrino, WGA senior vice president of tournaments. “We were extremely fortunate this past year to have benefited from the generosity of our partners at BMW, Olympia Fields and the PGA TOUR. The efforts and hard work of everyone involved helped us overcome the many obstacles we faced due to the pandemic and to once again give back by funding college scholarships for caddies.”

Conducted the week of August 24-30 by the WGA, the 2020 BMW Championship continued the tradition of raising funds for its sole beneficiary, the Evans Scholars Foundation. Due to the impact of the global pandemic, the 2020 BMW Championship joined with many other professional sports events in being held without spectators, a move that allowed the competition to occur but did result in greatly decreased revenue. In comparison, the 2019 BMW Championship attended by an estimated 130,000 spectators, raised a record $4.4 million for the Evans Scholars Foundation.

“We went from planning for our usual 125,000-plus spectators to closing the event to all but the essential participants – players and their caddies, tournament officials and volunteers,” Pellegrino noted. “BMW and the PGA TOUR responded by creating fun, one-of-a-kind events to showcase the event and its great history, like the Wednesday Match Play Challenge. In addition, Olympia Fields' members stepped up by handling all volunteer duties, and ensuring the players felt no difference than any other year. In the end, the efforts of everyone involved are helping 1,045 young men and women better their lives through higher education as Evans Scholars attending 19 leading universities nationwide."

To help offset the lower revenue and create an opportunity to generate additional support for the Evans Scholars, the first-ever BMW Match Play Challenge was held on Wednesday, Aug. 26. The televised nine-hole charity exhibition was played on the back nine of Olympia Fields Country Club's North Course. Bryson DeChambeau, who won the 2020 U.S. Open in September, and four-time PGA TOUR winner Kevin Na defeated 2020 PGA Championship winner Collin Morikawa and fellow California alum Max Homa in a six-point Scotch Match. The event raised nearly $200,000 for the Evans Scholars Foundation.

Despite the pandemic, the continued interest and support of the 2020 event has given the WGA, BMW and PGA TOUR further reasons to be excited about the 2021 BMW Championship, to be held at Caves Valley Golf Club next August – the first PGA TOUR event in the Baltimore area in 60 years.

"With BMW's continued support – and the enthusiasm we're seeing in Maryland and throughout the East Coast – we're looking forward to another successful BMW Championship," Pellegrino added. "The excitement shown by the Baltimore-area golf community around Caves Valley is something we can't wait to see. And we hope and expect to be welcoming our usual thousands of spectators to see first-hand what the BMW Championship is all about."

Caves Valley, in Owings Mills, Maryland, will host the BMW Championship from August 24-29, 2021, marking the first time the event has been held in Maryland. For individual tickets and corporate hospitality options, visit <http://www.bmwchampionship.com/>
