

Three Valley wineries honored with Historic Preservation Awards

Posted on May 6, 2016 by Sonoma Valley Sun

The Sonoma League for Historic Preservation has announced winners of its 2016 Historic Preservation Awards, to be celebrated with a May 18 reception at the League's Heritage and Events Center Garden.

Three Sonoma Valley wineries — Buena Vista Winery, Pangloss Cellars and Three Sticks Winery — will be honored for their preservation of significant historic structures on their respective properties.

Accepting the awards will be Jean-Charles Boisset, Proprietor of Buena Vista Winery; Winemaker Erich Bradley of Pangloss Cellars; and owners Bill and Eva Price of Three Sticks Winery

“Sonoma is not only the site of major California historical events but also the birthplace of the California wine industry,” said League President Robert Demler. “It is therefore appropriate that the League recognizes those wineries that have significantly contributed to preserving Sonoma's rich architectural heritage.”

Boisset purchased Buena Vista Winery in 2011 and immediately began a significant restoration to preserve and protect the winery's cellars and caves. In 2012, a seismic retrofit (above) was completed that allowed the long-closed cellars to re-open to the public. Said Architect Naomi Miroglio, “The most challenging, yet gratifying aspect of the project was to achieve Boisset's vision to develop a structural upgrade scheme that would have no visible impact to the historic character and features of the building.”