

8 Haute SF Happenings Not to Miss This Fall

BY KATIE SWEENEY | DINING + DRINKING, NEWS | OCTOBER 14, 2015

It feels like 4th of July was just yesterday, so it's hard to believe that it is already mid-October — time flies when you're having fun, right? With so many fabulous events in the upcoming weeks, it's safe to say that in the blink of an eye, we'll be ringing in the new year. But before we do, there is ceviche to be eaten and Pinot Noir to be drunk. Wondering what's on our agenda for the rest of October and early November? Here are eight haute happenings that are not to be missed.

Wine

The 17th-annual A Wine & Food Affair in Northern Sonoma County is an excellent reason to get out of the city. On Saturday, November 7 and Sunday, November 8, 100 wineries stretching across Sonoma will be participating in the event. Each winery will offer wine lovers special food and wine pairings. Wineries include some of our favorites: DeLoach Vineyards, Francis Ford Coppola Winery, Merriam Vineyards, Ridge Vineyards-Lytton Springs, and Simi Winery.

Robert Parker's Wine Advocate is coming to town with a no-holds-barrel wine tasting experience. On Saturday, November 14th, A Matter of Taste San Francisco is being held at The Palace Hotel from 1-6 pm. 150 of the most iconic Pinot Noirs and Chardonnays as well as cult-favorites from California's Rhone Rangers will be poured at the grand tasting. There are also three Master Classes (Single Vineyard Chardonnay, Pinot Noir Across Terroir, and Rhone Titans of California) for those wishing to partake in educational wine activities
