9 Eco-Friendly Sonoma & Napa Wines That Will Please Your Palate and Our Planet

by SARAH STERCH

On Earth Day, April 22, millions of people around the world will explore ways to help preserve our planet through eco-friendly practices. Wine production is no exception – Northern California is home to some of the finest biodynamic, organic, and natural wines in the world, crafted by winemakers who care deeply about the environment and produce healthy wines devoid of chemicals and additives. Click through the gallery above for nine eco-friendly Sonoma and Napa wines, and one Mendocino Chardonnay, that aren't just good for the planet and your health, but that will also please your palate.

SLIDE 5 OF 10

2014 DeLoach Estate Chardonnay \(\$50\)

DeLoach Vineyards estate vineyards and gardens became certified biodynamic in 2010 and today they produce estate wines that consistently score 90+ in Wine Spectator. After 14 months in French oak, this wine has a nose of honeysuckle, Fuji apple, and pie crust, followed by a rich, hefty mouthfeel. The taste is supple with flavors of Asian pear, nutmeg and honey. Drink now or age for five more years for a real treat. (Photo courtesy of Boisset Collection)
