Towering 376 feet above the bay, Nob Hill has long served as San Francisco's posh pedestal. Deriving its name from the Hindi word nabob, or "wealthy and powerful," this signature neighborhood is home to some of San Francisco's most sought-after addresses. Not only is the area luxurious, it also serves as a gateway to several of San Francisco's most iconic sites, offering a wealth of options for clients who venture just beyond its base.

Sleep

After a day of exploring, guests will sleep comfortably at The Ritz-Carlton, San Francisco. The white, neoclassical building is a historical landmark perched at the top of Nob Hill, offering guests expansive views of the surrounding city. As its namesake implies, the hotel stuns in both service and design. This year's redesign led to updates to the guestrooms and several common areas. Cool blues and smoky grays dominate the color scheme, meant to mimic the steely waters of the nearby bay as well as the dense fog that the city is famous for.

After dinner at Parallel 37, the property's on-site restaurant, head to the hotel's newly opened Jean-Charles Boisset Wine Tasting Salon for a nightcap. The space functions as both as an ultra-chic tasting lounge and a high-end retail boutique.
