YOUNTVILLE

Rich in Viticultural History

The Yountville district became a sub-appellation of Napa Valley in 1998. Its viticultural history, however, started in the 1800s, when George Calvert Yount first planted vineyards near the town which now bears his name. When Yount first saw the Napa Valley, he said, "In such a place I should love to live and die." He settled there in 1836, and planted the first vineyard in the Valley.

Today, there are 2,700 acres under vine, thriving in rich, varied soils amid a unique microclimate; the valley's chilliest region. The long, cool growing season produces age-worthy wines that show concentrated flavors and velvety tannins. The dominant varieties cultivated there are Sauvignon Blanc and Cabernet Sauvignon.

It's easy to walk (or bike) the entire town, given it's a little over a mile long ... be sure to take advantage of its Art Walk.
