Memorial Day weekend marks the beginning of two things: Summer and rosé drinking season. But with more and more options popping up on shelves, which ones should you reach for? I chatted with Brian Smith, chief wine officer at Winc, Laura Maniec, master sommelier and co-founder of Corkbuzz Restaurant and Wine Bar, and Alyssa Vitrano, founder of the pop culture wine blog Grapefriend, to get their picks for favorite rosé wines under $20.

"As far as sparkling rosés, I really like a Crémant du Bourgogne, which is a sparkling wine made in France outside of Champagne," says Maniec. "If any of your favorite regions make a Cremant I think it's a nice summer rosé. It's really pretty, has this nice light pink color, and still has the bubble quality of a champagne, but for a fraction of the price."
