A DAY TRIP TO NAPA WITH JETSUITEX.

DAVID CHRISTOPHER LEE × JUNE 11, 2017

We've all had our fair share of experiences with going through Security at the airport. Even if you are flying business or first class, the one thing we know that it is not fun to get held up in Security. JetSuiteX is a new flying concept that lets you fly out of a private airport.

We took a quick day trip to Napa and left from the private Burbank Airport. We arrived at a gorgeous hangar, checked in and literally walked onto the plane in 20 minutes. There were no lines, no hassles, and no x-ray machines. It was so easy and we felt relaxed when boarding the plane. From start to finish, the process of hopping on the plane was simple.

We cruised the sky in the JetSuite XL which is a 30 seat Embraer E135, better known as "everyone's private jet." Each seat has at least 36-inches of pitch, free WiFi, and entertainment. The cabin is clean and has a contemporary feel to it. We were impressed that there were power outlets at every seat...something we are definitely not used to when flying commercial.

The short flight was only an hour and we landed in Concord, California. We stepped outside of the plane and walked onto the tarmac and were whisked away in a Mercedes Sprinter van. Off to Napa we went in style.

Our first stop was Raymond Vineyards. Raymond Vineyards has over 300 acres of estate vineyards in the Napa Valley, in 3 locations. Each parcel is matched to varietals which perform well in that particular climate and soil type. In addition, the winery maintains long term growing contracts with over 15 Napa Valley growers, allowing the winery to take advantage of the micro-climates and sub-appellations within the Napa Valley.
