

7 Reasons to Love Fleming's La Jolla

in RESTAURANTS SO-CAL by FBWorld Team — August 22, 2016 at 12:40 pm | 0 comments

By Merilee Kern, 'The Luxe List' Executive Editor

Having lived in San Diego for well over a decade I've had the pleasure of eating at Fleming's La Jolla location on numerous occasions. With each, the award-winning restaurant exhibited why it's remained a North County staple for classic steakhouse fare since opening in 1999. Fleming's La Jolla was, in fact, the third restaurant this brand launched in the United States, not far behind the original Newport Beach location that opened in December of 1998.

Fleming's La Jolla, conveniently situated in the Aventine Center across the courtyard from the Hyatt Regency Hotel, is not one to rest on its laurels or nearly two-decade strong reputation, alone. For his part, for the past nine years Chef Partner Derek Reshaw has worked tirelessly to assure each dining experience stands on its own merits.

With that in mind, I checked in with Wayne Jarret, Operating Partner of Fleming's Prime Steakhouse & Wine Bar La Jolla, to find out what's new and noteworthy on the menu and otherwise. The interview revealed these seven mouthwatering reasons to make your way to the revered restaurant this season.

MK: I've heard about Fleming's Reserve Pour, the LVE Collection by John Legend. How would you describe offering?

WJ: The LVE Collection by John Legend translates true love into the bold flavors and aromas savored in each glass. Our National Director of Wine, Maeve Pesquera, who selects the Fleming's 100 each year and curates the list of beverage, is always looking to identify the best and most unique wine varietals for our Guests to enjoy at Fleming's. The LVE Collection is exclusively available at Fleming's for a limited time.

If you're in the San Diego North County area and have a hankering for a perfectly cooked piece of prime beef, an amply portioned pork chop, a succulent lobster tail, classic steakhouse sides and other elevated victuals amid an energetic atmosphere, count on Fleming's La Jolla to make your outing a resounding success.