Drink Red, Go Green

Taste some great Russian River Pinots with wine-world leader Jean-Charles Boisset.

Next Friday is Earth Day. While you could honor this annual dedication to green living by shopping for a fleece made of recycled soda bottles, we have a much better suggestion: Taste some wine with us the night before.

On Thursday April 21 at 9pm EST, 6pm PST, join us for a live, interactive tasting with Jean-Charles Boisset, proprietor of DeLoach Vineyards and several other leading wineries committed to sustainable winegrowing. Jean-Charles will discuss all things sustainable, organic, and biodynamic as he leads this fun, informative, live video tasting of several vineyard-designate Pinot Noirs from Russian River Valley pioneer DeLoach Vineyards. He'll be joined by winemaker Brian Maloney.

If you'd like to taste along, click here to order a pack of sample-size DeLoach Pinots from TastingRoom.com. The mini bottles will be delivered right to your doorstep, and on the night of the tasting you'll go to www.bottlenotes.com/earthdaylive to sip and discuss with us!

You can ask questions during the tasting using the Twitter hash tag #earthdaywine, or submit your question in advance by emailing earthday@bottlenotes.com.

While ideal, you don't need to have a tasting kit to join; you can always go grab a bottle of DeLoach Pinot Noir at a retailer near you--or just be a live-tasting gawker. You'll get your Earth Day kudos for participating no matter what. Click here to order your tasting kit now to make sure it
