

JOHN LEGEND'S NEW ROSÉ AND 15 MORE CELEBRITY WINES TO TRY THIS SUMMER

Is there a better way to cool down from the summer heat than with a glass of perfectly chilled rosé? No, there is nothing that quenches the thirst of a drinking-aged adult as remarkably as the crisp, sometimes dry, possibly floral, often juicy taste of pink summer water spilling down the throat on a humid afternoon in June. John Legend knows this, and it's likely why the award-winning singer recently introduced his own rosé for adults to enjoy in the summer.

As well-versed in wine as he is in music, Legend launched his new branded rosé on Thursday as an expansion of his wine label, LVE.

Dubbed Côtes de Provence Rosé, the 2017 vintage is pale pink in color and boasts aromatic notes of peach blossom, raspberry and apricot. Upon first sip, drinkers are delighted with splashes of “fresh picked strawberry and white nectarine” on the palate, accompanied by a rich and lengthy mineral finish.

While the rosé won't be distributed nationally until sometime next year, wine connoisseurs can get their hands on a bottle of Legend's good stuff via the LVE website for $25. Bottles are expected to start shipping in early July.

Legend's LVE brand, which debuted in 2015, also includes a 2016 Chardonnay, a 2014 Cabernet Sauvignon and a 2014 red blend for those looking to fill their wine cellars with more than just rosé.

The Darkness and Light singer isn't the only celebrity blessing consumers with the artistry that is wine-making. In fact, several Hollywood A-listers have either lent their name to a wine brand or developed their own line of grape goodness. Check out a list of them below.
