

Veni, vidi, vino: San Francisco's top 5 wine tasting rooms to visit now

Fall is the most popular season for wine tasting, and while a trip to Napa to visit wineries in person is the quintessential Northern California vacation, there are also plenty of great tasting rooms closer to home.

Hoodline crunched the numbers to find the top places to pull some corks in San Francisco, using both Yelp data and our own secret sauce to produce a ranked list of where to venture next time you're planning a vinous excursion.

3. Wattle Creek Winery Tasting Room

Wattle Creek Winery Tasting Room, located at 900 N. Point St. in Ghirardelli Square, is another top choice, with Yelpers giving the single-winery, libations-only tasting room 4.5 stars out of 177 reviews.

Wattle Creek creates its wine from grapes grown in Sonoma County's Alexander Valley. It has outdoor seating and offers wine tastings with no reservation required.
