EXPERIENCE HISTORY...

Creole – Timeless Elegance of the Seas

A true icon of the sea and a masterpiece of vintage yachting, Creole is much more than a sailing boat: it is a statement of style, power and refinement. Built in 1927 by the legendary Camper & Nicholsons shipyard, Creole embodies the pinnacle of early 20th-century English nautical craftsmanship, blending monumental proportions with unmistakable grace.

At over 65 metres in length, Creole is one of the largest wooden sailing schooner in the world still in service. But what makes her truly unique is her soul: a discreet, almost whispered elegance that is reflected in the mirror-polished mahogany details, the original wood panelling, the fine fabrics and the perfectly preserved inlaid wood salons.

Owned by the legendary Gucci family, Creole has long been a symbol of their aesthetic vision: a combination of aristocratic heritage and visionary spirit. Under the care of the fashion house family for over 40 years, Creole enjoyed a golden age, sailing between Capri, Saint-Tropez and Porto Cervo like a discreet queen, shrouded in an aura of glamour.

It is not just a yacht: it is a stage where time stands still, where every sunset becomes a work of art and every detail tells a story of intimate and authentic luxury. Sailing on Creole is not simply about sailing the seas: it means belonging to an elite that recognizes the value of excellence, classic elegance and eternal beauty.
