

LAST MINUTE UPDATE:

Dear ministry partner,

It is Monday February 11, 2019. There have been street demonstrations and unrest this week in Haiti since Friday against the president. The Demonstrators burned tires, used them as roadblocks and did other things to force people to stay indoors. It was supposed to be done only on Feb 7 but they extend these things today and possibly tomorrow and more. In fact, I do not know for how long this state of siege will continue. There have been some scattered riots. It is a very fragile situation, the activists mostly young people are provoking the police men, in order to fuel these demonstrations in which they demand the removal of an elected President. The unrest is worst this time I may be wrong, but I doubt that the President will be able to survive this politically this time. We were not able to go to regular church service on Sunday. We had home worship service in the orphanage.

Please pray for peace in Haiti and pray for us.
