

BERKELEY MINERAL RESOURCES PLC

("BMR" or the "Company")

Strategic Cooperation Agreement with Chinese Company

Berkeley Mineral Resources is pleased to announce the signing of a Strategic Cooperation Agreement with Hunan Nuclear Geological Bureau ("HNGB"), a company located in Hunan Province, Peoples Republic of China ("PRC").

HNGB is a substantial group with interests in nuclear technologies and plant construction. It also has investments in the mining of critical metals outside China, notably in Australia and New Zealand where its interests include advanced exploration and development of projects to produce antimony, tungsten and gold. In total HNGB operates in 20 countries, including Zambia where they have lead & zinc interests.

Under the terms of the Agreement, the parties will co-operate in areas of project identification, geological exploration, mining rights management, technical support, and personnel exchange and financing with the initial focus being Zambia where BMR's current licenced projects, operations and expertise are located. HNGB already has a technical office established in Lusaka, Zambia.

Masoud Alikhani, Chairman, commented:

"We expect the signing of this Strategic Agreement to lead to immediate cooperation between BMR and HNGB. HNGB will have access to our technical expertise and knowledge of Zambia and they are interested in expanding their investments in Zambia and in funding BMR's expansion".
