All Eyes On Michigan After
SCOTUS Sends Back Cases

Macomb Extends LGBT
Protections To Employees

“One day we’ll get rid of this word ‘gay,’ because it’s irrelevant.”

– Annie Lennox, pg. 16

U.S. Senate Candidate Talks LGBT, The Dishonorably Discharged

A SOLID ALLY IN
PETERS
Make the choice Suburban Buick GMC Ferndale

877-913-5086 • www.SuburbanBuickGMC.com

Fall into Savings!
Prices Good October 7 - 13, 2014
We Reserve The Right To Limit Quantities. No Sales To Dealers

Fresh Bananas
Excludes organic
39¢ Pound

Absopure 24 Pack Water
16.9-oz bottles
With $10.00 minimum purchase - Limit 1
Add'l Quantities $2.99 Ea

Florida's Natural
Old El Paso
4/ $5
2/ $5

8.2 to 11-oz Tortilla Shells
4.5 to 7.4-oz Taco Shells
16-oz Refried Beans

Florida's Natural

U.S. 23 & Washtenaw - Ann Arbor, in the Arborland Mall

NO SALES TO DEALERS. WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO LIMIT QUANTITIES.
www.hillers.com for more locations & hours

Great for game time sandwiches

Hormone, Antibiotic & Gluten Free

All Natural
Grade A Amish - 4 to 7-Lb Average
Timber Valley Farms
Frozen Turkey Breast
Beef, Turkey, Chicken
Artisan Gourmet Patties

Limit 2 Please

$1.57 Pound

Fresh Made at Hiller's!
This is a huge step forward for our entire country being a place where every family’s love and commitment can be recognized and respected under the law.

– Tammy Baldwin on recent marriage equality victories, pg. 11

Join The Conversation @ PrideSource.com

Access The Michigan Progressive Voter Guide

Go to www.MiVoterGuide.com to see who the progressive organizations of Michigan are endorsing in the 2014 general election!

Our Exclusive Interview with Mark Schauer & Lisa Brown

Don’t miss BTL’s exclusive interviews with Michigan Governor candidate Mark Schauer and Lieutenant Governor candidate Lisa Brown, online at Pridesource.com in our Voter Guide.

Win Two Tickets To See Chrissie Hynde

Enter online to win two tickets to see Chrissie Hynde Nov. 15 at The Jack White Theatre in the Masonic Temple.

Go to http://www.pridesource.com/tickets_contest.html
A Solid Ally in Peters

BY JAN STEVENSON AND AJ TRAGER

FARMINGTON HILLS – U.S. Rep. Gary Peters (D-MI 14) is ahead in most polls to win the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by the retiring Sen. Carl Levin, a Democratic powerhouse who has held that U.S. Senate seat for 35 years. Peters is running against Republican Terri Lynn Land.

BTL spoke with Peters about his campaign, about why he is such a strong supporter of LGBT rights and about his commitment to LGBT servicemen and women who were dishonorably discharged and his plan to retroactively change their status to honorably discharged.

BTL: Within the Michigan congressional delegation, you and John Conyers are the only ones that have earned 100 percent on the Human Rights Campaign’s Congressional Scorecard. You are also a member of the Congressional LGBT Caucus, a group of 112 House members committed to LGBT equality. This is a long way from 1996, when you voted for the Michigan Marriage Ban as a state senator. Can you talk about your evolution and how you became such a strong LGBT ally?

Peters: I always look back at that vote and regret that I made that vote. I think part of it is the natural evolution of learning more about the issue that then broadened me to become a champion for marriage equality. Initially I was for civil unions, and in fact, I was attacked for that position when I ran for attorney general in 2002. But certainly as long as I’ve been a member of Congress the last six years, I have been fully supportive of marriage equality and a proud member of the LGBT caucus. I believe that people should have equal rights. These are basic human rights that apply to everybody. We need to make sure that the laws follow the basic tenet that we should all have access to the same human rights, regardless of a person’s background – broadly defined.

BTL: Please tell us about where you stand on LGBT rights versus your opponent, Terri Lynn Land. What’s your perception on where she stands and how you differ?

Peters: Well, it’s always hard to know, because she does not talk much about anything. She doesn’t open herself up to any press interviews. She has refused a debate. It’s basically as U.S. News and World Report and other media outlets have said: she is running an invisible campaign and is basically hiding behind millions of dollars of false attack ads, and that’s how she’s trying to get elected. It’s difficult for me to know where she’s coming from and where she is on issues.

BTL: On Nov. 4:

... as strongly as people feel, it doesn’t make any difference unless they actually go vote. That is the only way that their voice is heard.

Peters: ...
community; she was silent. She refused to condemn him. And she remained silent and let him continue to make those kinds of statements against the LGBT community. It was only at the very end that she did speak up, and her rationale for doing so was that she thought it was in the best interest of the Republican Party. She didn’t say it was because those were bigoted, hateful comments that have no place in civil discourse; she looked at it strictly as a party person. To me, that is not the type of leadership you want from someone in the U.S. Senate. You want someone who is going to be a leader and represent everybody in the state of Michigan and be an aggressive advocate.

I take great pride that I’ve been in the leadership on issues that are important to the LGBT community. I was very active in the repeal of the military’s “Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell” policy. I served as a former Lieutenant Commander in the United States Navy Reserve and served with many men and women who are very patriotic, and I wasn’t concerned with what their sexual orientation was. To me, the most important thing was that they were patriots that wanted to serve their country. So I was very pleased that DADT was repealed.

I also supported the repeal of the Defense of Marriage Act. I signed the amicus brief to support the overturning of the DOMA, and I am a co-sponsor of the Employment Non-Discrimination Act and will continue to work on issues that I think are important for us to address as a society. I think my opponent has clearly shown, not only will she not be a leader, but she is opposed to these issues. When push comes to shove, she stays silent.

BTL: You have sponsored and co-sponsored a lot of LGBT positive legislation in your time in Congress. What legislation are you most proud of?

Peters: I would say the “Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell” repeal, and that’s because we were successful in something I thought was courageous. Now I am working on legislation that says folks who received dishonorable discharges because of the old policy will be able to go back and change their status to an honorable discharge.

BTL: What would that mean for veterans who were dishonorably discharged under the old policy?

Peters: Tarnishing the records of patriotic veterans I think is unacceptable. We owe veterans who are willing to go into harm’s way to protect our country to have an honorable discharge – to know that the country is thankful for their service in an honorable way.

And, importantly, if you have a dishonorable discharge, you are precluded from having many of the benefits that you would otherwise have as a veteran. If elected to the U.S. Senate, I would pick that up and continue to work on that issue, absolutely.

BTL: How are you feeling about the race and your campaign at this point?

Peters: The New York community has got to be to get people to vote. If the LGBT community votes, that’s a big number of people. The differences are so stark between the candidates; folks have to understand just how important this election is.

Millions of dollars are being spent by the other side, but their ultimate strategy is to suppress the vote. They are putting up a lot of bigoted stuff, and it’s so cynical. It’s about turning people off from the process and they think, well, if they do enough negative ads, people might just not go vote. They will just say, “Ah I’m just not gonna go vote, it doesn’t make a difference.” So if there is anything BTL can do to really highlight that, as strongly as people feel, it doesn’t make any difference unless they actually go vote. That is the only way that their voice is heard.

Last Detroit Mattachine Society Officer To Speak In Ann Arbor

In honor of LGBT History Month, the remaining officer of the Detroit Area Council of the Mattachine Society, Jerry “Jai” Moore, will share his memories and experiences with gay activism in Ann Arbor. Professor Gayle Rubin will also share her remarks at the University of Michigan event.

Detroit’s Mattachine Society offered sanctuary to gay and lesbian Detroiters who sought to organize in the 1950s and 60s, a time when homosexuals were arrested, institutionalized or ostracized. Members of the group, including Moore (who served as officer from 1958-1960), were instrumental in the social change that would sweep the nation in the latter half of the 20th century and beyond.

The Detroit Mattachine records are currently a part of the Joseph A. Labadie Collection at U of M’s library.

Moore and Professor Rubin will speak from 7-8:30 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 23 at the Hatcher Graduate Library, Gallery (Room 100), 913 S. University Ave., Ann Arbor.

For more information, visit www.lib.umich.edu/events/detroit-lgbt-heritage.

LGBTQ Youth Development Challenge Offers Trip To Denver

UNITY Michigan will be offering an opportunity for LGBTQ youth across the state to reduce discrimination and improve legal protections while potentially winning a trip to Colorado.

According to UNITY Michigan’s Melissa Fish, “The State Legislature is considering a proposed amendment to the Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act that would add legal protections against any form of discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity. We want to hear your ideas on how reducing discrimination would improve your life.”

LGBTQ young people between the ages of 18-24 are asked to work in teams of two to submit a creative work or proposal, 1,200 words or less, on how the inclusion of sexual orientation and gender identity in the Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act will directly benefit their lives in one or more of the following areas: education, employment and health care.

Proposals will be reviewed by the UNITY Michigan Coalition on a 100 point scale. 25 points will come from the proposal’s ability to demonstrate a clear understanding of the act and proposed amendment, and 25 points will be judged on the execution of the statement of need. The remaining 50 points of scoring will come from the proposal’s “primary area of need and related questions.”

The top two proposals will win a trip to Denver, Colo. for the next Creating Change Conference, which will be held Feb. 4-8, 2015. Expenses are not to exceed $1,200 per team.

The deadline for submissions is Oct. 30. Completed proposals can be emailed to F.HopeREC@gmail.com. Learn more at www.unitymichigan.org.

ONLINE

Peters Campaign www.petersformichigan.com
Terri Lynn Land Campaign https://terrilynnland.com
Please visit BTL’s Voter Guide 2014 @ www.MIVoterGuide.com or @ www.pridesource.com to see all the Equality endorsements for Nov. 4
Supreme Court Denies Seven Appeals In Five States
Marriage Equality Will Soon Be Law In 11 More States

BY LISA KEEN

In a surprise development, the U.S. Supreme Court announced Monday that it would not accept for review any of the seven appeals on same-sex marriage bans from five states. The action means that the stays placed on lower court decisions in all five states – decisions that struck down bans on marriage for same-sex couples – are immediately lifted, making way for lower courts to issue orders requiring the states to stop enforcing their bans and begin issuing marriage licenses.

The action also means that six other states in the same federal circuits as the five states which had appeals before the high court will have to abide by the federal appeals court rulings in those circuits. Otherwise, they take the unusual tact of asking their circuits for full bench review of their cases. A three-judge panel in all three circuits—the 4th, 7th and 10th – struck down the bans on marriage for same-sex couples.

Very soon, same-sex couples will likely be able to marry in 30 states plus the District of Columbia, tipping the balance in favor of marriage equality from the previous 19 states and D.C.

The Salt Lake Tribune reported that the 10th Circuit issued an order just minutes after the Supreme Court’s announcement was made public, lifting the stay in that state and alerting clerks in Utah that they should immediately abide by its ruling that the ban is unconstitutional. Colorado Attorney General John Suthers implied that the Supreme Court announcement denying review of the cases was tantamount to a ruling.

“We have consistently maintained that we will abide by the Supreme Court’s determination on the constitutionality of marriage laws,” said Suthers in a press release. “By choosing not to take up the matter, the court has left the 10th Circuit ruling in place.”

He said Colorado clerks “must begin issuing marriage licenses to all same-sex couples” soon after the Tenth Circuit issued its order.

In Wisconsin, Republican Governor Scott Walker told reporters on his re-election campaign trail that the issue is “resolved” and there would be no further attempts to defend the state ban; Dane County announced it would issue licenses to same-sex couples immediately.

The Indiana attorney general posted a statement indicating the state would begin issuing licenses “soon.” Many counties in the state have since begun issuing marriage licenses to same-sex couples.

The 4th Circuit issued its order mandating that states stop enforcing the bans at 1 p.m. EDT Monday. Virginia Attorney General Mark Herring, who has opposed that state’s ban, issued a press release saying that same-sex couples could begin obtaining marriage licenses as soon as that order is issued.

“Local clerks are receiving guidance and forms necessary to begin performing marriages today,” said Herring’s office, “and the Attorney General’s Office is working with the Governor’s Office and state agencies to implement any needed changes in light of this action.”

“A new day has dawned, and the rights guaranteed by our Constitution are shining through,” said Herring in a press release Monday morning shortly after the Supreme Court issued its “Orders List” indicating that the seven appeals – including three from Virginia — were being denied.

“This is a tremendous moment in Virginia history,” said Herring. “We will continue to fight discrimination wherever we find it, but today, we celebrate a moment when we move closer to fulfilling the promise of equality Ignited centuries ago in Virginia and so central to the American experience.”

Shannon Minter, legal director for the National Center for Lesbian Rights, which has been involved in the 10th Circuit case out of Utah, said NCLR is “thrilled.”

“This is a huge step forward for Utah and the entire country,” said Minter. “We are hopeful that the other cases pending across the country will also vindicate the freedom to marry, so that all couples, no matter where they travel or live, will be treated as equal citizens and have the same basic security and protections for their families that other Americans enjoy.”

The Supreme Court’s announcement does not legally affect the remaining 20 states, but it could give courts in those other states and circuits some pause before upholding similar bans. Some experts say they expect the Supreme Court will almost certainly take up an appeal should a federal appeals court rule such bans to be constitutional.

Prominent constitutional law scholar Laurence Tribe of Harvard University, who argued against bans on sodomy in the 1986 Bowers v Hardwick case, said “As soon as a solid split emerges, I fully expect the Court to grant (review),” said Tribe. “I’d watch the 6th Circuit if I were you.”

A three-judge panel of the 6th Circuit heard oral arguments Aug. 6 in six marriage equality lawsuits from four states: Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio and Tennessee. The panel has yet to issue its opinion, but questions from two of the three judges during the argument gave repeated voice to various justifications for the bans.

Jon Davidson, national legal director for Lambda Legal, which is involved in a number of marriage equality cases, agrees that the Supreme Court will likely take a Circuit decision from the 6th or 5th Circuits if they conflict with the decisions rendered by the 4th, 7th, and 10th Circuits. But he said he doesn’t think the high court would consider an appeal from a future Circuit, such as the 9th, which might agree with the previous Circuits.

Davidson said there is a way that the six states in the 4th, 7th and 10th Circuits — who were not part of Monday’s batch of seven cases — could try to avoid or delay allowing same-sex couples to marry in those states. He said a state, such as South Carolina, could try and appeal an existing case to the full circuit.
The decision by the U.S. Supreme Court Monday (Oct. 6) to decline to hear multiple cases regarding marriage equality will soon result in 30 states and the District of Columbia offering legal same-sex marriage. Michigan, however, remains a state where same-sex marriages are not yet legal.

In light of the rulings, however, experts in the state are eyeing the state’s appeal pending before the 6th Circuit Federal Court of Appeals. In that case, the state is arguing a federal district court judge erred when he struck down Michigan’s ban in March. For a brief period of less than 24 hours following the ruling by Judge Bernard Friedman, over 300 same-sex couples were able to legally marry in the state.

Experts say the Michigan case could make it to the U.S. Supreme Court.

“DeBoer v Snyder is a case that legal experts have anticipated could reach the Supreme Court because it is the only case that has had a trial,” says Sommer Foster, director of political advocacy at Equality Michigan.

“We look forward to the 6th Circuit decision, and we hope that the court rules soon. I am not sure of the impact that this decision has on the 6th Circuit, but with 30 states allowing the freedom to marry and an additional 51 million Americans now living in states where folks can marry whom they love, we can see that marriage equality will become a reality in this state sooner or later.”

Kari Moss, executive director of the ACLU of Michigan, was more cautious in her analysis of the role the DeBoer case might play in getting a Supreme Court hearing and ruling on the right to marriage equality.

“I hate to try to read tea leaves when it comes to what the Supreme Court might do,” she said in a phone interview. However, she said the move by the court Monday morning to refuse to hear the pending cases could have an impact.

“They had an opportunity to take up the question but declined. They essentially have allowed marriage equality in those states,” Moss said. “It shows the court has a level of confidence that it can handle the cases at this time.”
DEMOCRATS SUPPORT FULL EQUALITY FOR EVERY MICHIGANDER

Right now in Michigan, a person can be fired from their job simply because of their sexual orientation, without any regard for how good they are at the work they do.
Macomb County Extends LGBT Protections To Employees

BY AJ TRAGER

MACOMB COUNTY - Residents from all over the county came out to voice their support or disapproval at the Macomb County Board of Commissioners meeting on Sept. 18. The board approved the Human Rights Policy that prevents discrimination against LGBT county employees by adding sexual orientation and gender identity to a list of protected classes specified under county discriminatory protection law.

The new policy will protect roughly 2,600 workers from being fired for their sexual orientation and gender identity and ensures that the county cannot refuse to hire new employees on that basis.

The vote came down to a 8-5 split, mostly falling along party lines. Commissioners Don Brown, James Carabelli, Robert Mijac, Joe Sabatini and Kathy Vosburg cast the dissenting votes. Mijac, D-Sterling Heights, was the only Democrat to join the four Republican commissioners in voting against the policy.

Commissioner Fred Miller, a Democrat from Mount Clemens, spearheaded the effort to get the policy through to a vote. It took him six months, and at least four drafts, but believes that this represents an “important step forward” for the county.

“It was something that I was involved with for almost two terms,” Miller said. “I was interested since before I was elected, and it kept getting put off. Two things that added additional urgency: the passage of the ordinance in Sterling Heights and Colin, the young MSU student from Shelby who reached out to us, who emailed that the city (East Lansing) has protections, but his home county doesn’t, so ‘what gives?’”

The four-page document specifically states that it “shall not be construed to require preferential treatment of any person,” including LGBT individuals, and is meant to provide an additional layer of protections to the county’s human resources policy.

“This action ensures that employees of Macomb County will be treated based solely on their merits, instead of on who they love,” Miller said. “This is an important example of how Macomb County is a place where tolerance and inclusion is the prevailing sentiment.”

Though the city of Sterling Heights has the ability to mandate a citywide non-discrimination ordinance, the county does not have that authority. The most Miller could do was put those protections in place for the employees.

The next step in the process is to extend the protections for contractors and contract employees, which Miller says has a $630 million financial footprint.

Miller and Macomb County now look towards the state to make the necessary changes to the Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act, which will provide full discriminatory protections for all Michiganders.

“...This action ensures that employees of Macomb County will be treated based solely on their merits, instead of on who they love.”

- Commissioner Fred Miller, a Democrat from Mount Clemens, spearheaded the effort to get the policy through to a vote.
Move Michigan Forward Nov. 4
BTL Strongly Endorses These Statewide Candidates

Mark Schauer for MI Governor
http://markschauer.com
Lisa Brown for Lt. Governor

Gary Peters for U.S. Senate
www.petersformichigan.com

Mark Totten for MI Attorney General
www.marktotten.com

Godfrey Dillard for Secretary of State
www.facebook.com/DillardforMichigan

MI Supreme Court (8 yr. term)
Richard Bernstein

MI Supreme Court (2 yr. term)
Deborah Thomas

State Board of Education
Cassandra Ulbrich

MSU Trustees
Faylene Owen
George Perles

WSU Governors
Marilyn Kelly
Dana Thompson

UofM Regents
Mike Behm
Katherine White

Get Your Complete 2014 Voter Guide
The BTL LGBT & Progressive Voter Guide
Is currently being developed and will be available online at www.pridesource.com or mvoterguide.com

Candidates have been returning BTL Voter Questionaires. Endorsements for candidates running for State Senate and State House will be available online as information is received.

Important Dates & Resources
Monday, Oct. 6 – Last day to register for Nov. 4 General Election
Tuesday, Nov. 4 – General Election

Check here for your current status as a registered voter in Michigan https://webapps.sos.state.mi.us/mivote

Available Online • Mobile App Ready

Marriage Equality For Michigan In 2015?
It’s Simple.

Your roadmap to a progressive Michigan.

This October, simply enter your zip code at MiVoterGuide.com and discover who will fight for LGBT equality and other progressive causes at the local and statewide level. Then November 4, head to the polls with your personal voter guide and help move Michigan forward.
of comfort with marriage equality and indicates they did not feel the issue had percolated enough in the states."

Moss said it is not uncommon for the nation’s high court to allow significant legal issues to bounce around in the lower courts awaiting distinct splits in the various appeals’ circuits before taking up cases.

She said the decision may play a role in the 6th Circuit’s decision.

“It’s certainly possible the 6th Circuit will consider the Supreme Court decision as relevant in their decision making process,” she said.

Moss acknowledged the importance the Michigan case carried because of its extensive legal record.

“The state has to be able to justify the ban with concrete evidence,” she said. “They weren’t able to do that. They had one expert witness disavowed by the university he was working for and another expert who was rejected by the judge as an expert.”

Politically, the decision came the day after Bill Schuette, Michigan’s Republican Attorney General, told Michigan Public Radio he expected the university he was working for and another to do that. They had one expert witness disavowed.

"It's certainly possible the 6th Circuit will consider the Supreme Court decision as relevant in their decision making process,” she said.

Moss acknowledged the importance the Michigan case carried because of its extensive legal record.

The state has to be able to justify the ban with concrete evidence,” she said. “They weren’t able to do that. They had one expert witness disavowed by the university he was working for and another expert who was rejected by the judge as an expert.”

Politically, the decision came the day after Bill Schuette, Michigan’s Republican Attorney General, told Michigan Public Radio he expected the university he was working for and another to do that. They had one expert witness disavowed.

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”

That case was refused by the court.

Schuette’s Democratic opponent in the general election, Mark Totten, issued a statement Monday saying the decision by the Supreme Court put Michigan’s position banning same-sex marriage “on the wrong side of the Constitution.”
It was during a rainy October night 82 years ago aboard a 20th Century Limited train returning to Washington, D.C., that the love between Eleanor Roosevelt and Lorena “Hick” Hickok got started.

Their love would last for 30 years and go the full distance of their busy lives. (Ken Burn’s current TV series, “The Roosevelts: An Intimate History” is receiving rave reviews by viewers and entertainment critics.)

Eleanor – soon to become America’s First Lady, and later in her long life, America’s Ambassador to the United Nations – had asked Ms. Hickok, an AP journalist covering Franklin Delano Roosevelt’s 1932 Democratic presidential campaign, to keep her company in Eleanor’s private compartment. She was returning from a friend’s funeral and didn’t want to make the sad journey alone.

As the 20th Century Limited whistled through unseen towns and sleepy villages, quiet twilight hours, they each spoke of hidden hurts and cautiously Hicks shared her secret shame. She was raped by her father and kicked out of the house at age 14.

(Perhaps Eleanor spoke of her husband’s philandering, and FDR’s love affair with Eleanor’s social secretary Lucy Mercer. Divorce was not an option, so she remained FDR’s wife in name only.)

At Christmas time, Hick gave Eleanor a gift of a sapphire and diamond ring. The ring was given to Hick by the world famous soprano, Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink, in appreciation for a musically sound newspaper interview. Eleanor would find the treasure to be a lasting comfort. That and Hick’s requisite kiss on her cheek.

Truth to tell, Eleanor and Hick were something of odd ducks together. Eleanor was taller, rather plain. Hick was stout and rather butch. Eleanor didn’t smoke or drink. Hick took gladly to cigars, whiskey, four-letter fustian. Little wonder! Her great grandfather was Wild Bill Hickok. (In passing: Detroit’s out Congregational Church pastor, Rev. William “Will” Lange, is related to both Wild Bill and Hick.)

The first woman to earn a New York Times byline, Hick’s beats included sports, crime, government. “Everybody loves Hick,” said a journalist coworker. (The same coworker, by the way, that Hick once tried to seduce.)

Hick was not Eleanor’s only lesbian contact. Eleanor had a business partnership with a Greenwich Village couple. The three friends made furniture for sale and ran a school for young women. “No form of love is to be despised,” was Eleanor’s progressive opinion.

Hick was a catalyst. She encouraged Eleanor to hold press conferences (358 in all), to write for newspaper syndication (8,000 My Day columns) and to earn financial independence by writing for magazines. Each exposure added to Eleanor’s political and intellectual stature, and so importantly, to her self-confidence.

Soon, however, the duties of First Lady took precedence over intimacy. Meetings with Hick and their circle of closeted lesbian friends became fewer; hand holding less. Their relationship continued mostly by hastily whispered, “Je t’aime.” President Roosevelt was elected to an unprecedented four consecutive terms. He died in office on April 12, 1945, four months before World War II ended in Europe (I was 9 at the time. In our Burton School piano class, we sang patriotic songs to mourn him.)

When the Eleanor/Hick correspondence became public in 1978, an astonished America learned that Eleanor’s idea of her husband’s Democratic New Deal policy included a bright touch of lavender in the Oval Office.

Civil Rights For All Means Including Trans

If you are a transgender resident of Michigan, if you are a friend of the transgender community, if someone in your family is a transgender person or if you believe all residents of our state, including gay and transgender people, deserve the same rights – you need to know that those of us who are transgender in Michigan are, at this moment, in a fight for our lives. Proposed amendments to the Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act would prevent discrimination based on gender identity, gender expression and sexual orientation. That is a good thing.

Studies show that most Michiganders believe everyone should be treated fairly and equally, but at the same time, an astonishing number of people think transgender people are already protected from discrimination by existing laws. Yet, this is not the case; it is still legal in Michigan to deny a transgender person employment, access to public facilities or housing simply because that person is transgender. As a result of such discrimination, transgender people experience extremely high rates of unemployment, homelessness, poverty and suicide, despite having high levels of education and a clear willingness to serve our communities. (For instance, transgender people are twice as likely to have served in the Armed Forces.) These facts simply cannot be reconciled with the notion that we are already protected. It just is not true.

Some people argue that a partial victory, one which protects only lesbian, gay and bi-affectionate people, is enough of a victory “for now,” even if it means leaving transgender Michiganders stranded at the side of the road. Those who would take out gender identity lack an understanding of what it means to be transgender or to encounter discrimination in all aspects of their lives. This view also sits in stark contrast to the best practices in many other states and throughout the business community that view broad protections for people of diverse gender identities, sexual orientation and gender expressions as essential to retaining a skilled workforce and building a prosperous economy that benefits us all. Ample evidence from many other states reveals that it is all but impossible to “come back” and fix a shortsighted law after it is passed – this would hold all of us back. But to the transgender community, our LGB brothers and sisters and our supporters, I have this to say: you must stay positive. You have powerful stories to tell, and there are ways you
From Dreams to Action: Economic Empowerment As A Social Justice Tool

Equality does not equal equity.

During the week of Sept. 24–27, I attended the National Black Justice Coalition’s “Annual Black LGBT Leadership Summit: Out on the Hill” in Washington D.C. This year’s summit was themed, “Emancipation Campaign: What does freedom mean to you?” During the week, we explored economic empowerment, lobbied around our issues on Capitol Hill and attended a national town hall about the Pan-African Progressive Movement for “LGBTI Dignity, Inclusion and Justice.” Some of us attended the Congressional Black Caucus’s 44th Annual Legislative Conference while others were invited to Black LGBT Leaders Day at the White House for a briefing about “HIV Among Gay and Bisexual Men.” Finally, there was a “State of the Black LGBT Community” where we discussed our role in the LGBT movement and in black America.

The week began with “Many Faces One Dream: LGBT Economic Empowerment Tour National Stakeholders Briefing” held at NASA Headquarters. Representatives from the U.S. Small Business Association (SBA), Industrial Bank, TD Bank, Black Enterprise, Nation Black Justice Coalition (NBJC) and the National Gay and Lesbian Chamber of Commerce (NGLCC) sat on panels throughout the day that focused on various aspects of economic empowerment and financial literacy. To set the tone of the day, a message was given that “economic empowerment could be used as a way to help solve social issues.” With that statement is where I enter; the majority of the issues in society are financial-based issues, for example: poverty, hunger and homelessness. The mission of the SBA is to create jobs through assisting small businesses: “55% of all jobs are created by small business and 66% of all new jobs since the 1970s.” A base can move even issues like a lack of political voice and access to health care with the dollars behind their words. Data based on communities is taken to legislators and presented as buying power.

Sharon Lettman-Hicks, executive director of NBJC, told us “equality does not equal equity.” Equity is often referred to in the social justice realm as acknowledging barriers to access and eliminating barriers to full participation of all people. During the briefing, we focused not only on access, but also on equity in terms of ownership. As we determine the LGBT agenda, we must realize that the right to marry has less weight in the lives of people who don’t have access to employment, health and housing. Beyond working, how are we building ownership in the community so that we may move from consumers to producers? Producers of jobs, producers of goods, and most importantly, producers of possibilities to people who look like us. As the program coordinator at KICK, I accept the charge of providing accessible information about financial literacy throughout our Careers & Employment quarter.

In moving our dreams to action, we must not only have the vision and determination, but also the discipline to do the work in between.

Rhiannon L. Chester is program coordinator at KICK - The Agency for Lesbian, Gay, Bi and Transgender African-Americans. She can be reached at rhiannonchester@e-kick.org. Learn more about KICK at www.e-kick.org
BY MIKE ODOM

It will be an action-packed weekend for competitors of the 29th Annual Motown Invitational Classic (MIC), Michigan’s oldest and largest LGBT bowling tournament that is scheduled to take place October 10–12 at Super Bowl in Canton.

With more than $10,000 in cash prizes, including singles, doubles and team awards, optional division jackpots and 50/50 raffles, the MIC tournament attracts on average more than 200 bowlers and non-bowler participants who attend every year from cities across the U.S. and Canada.

In addition to the prizes, this year’s “Super Heroes and Villains” theme will provide entertainment throughout the weekend by randomly matching bowlers with some of the most courageous heroes and dastardly villains in the Marvel and DC Universe.

According to Bill Havican, 2014 MIC Co-Director, the theme is a nod to the energy and excitement already taking place in metro Detroit as a result of the filming of the “Batman v. Superman: Dawn of Justice” blockbuster movie.

“Not only does the theme provide entertainment for our participants, but it also offers a special coat drive for local runaway and homeless LGBTQ youth who seek assistance this winter season. We will encourage all bowlers themselves,” said Jackson. “Whether you are supporting a loved one or are interested in making new friends, we encourage the local community to take advantage of this one-of-a-kind opportunity and join us tournament weekend.”

In addition to the MIC participants, representatives from this year’s benefiting nonprofit charities will have staff and volunteers on-hand to sell 50/50 tickets, raising money and awareness for each local organization. The charities include the Ruth Ellis Center, Higher Ground, Michigan Animal Adoption Network and Affirmations.

Since its inception, MIC event organizers have supported numerous local nonprofits with fundraising events, strategic partnerships and raffles over the course of the annual tournament weekend.

“This year, we also will hold a special coat drive for local runaway and homeless LGBTQ youth who seek assistance this winter season from the Ruth Ellis Center,” said Jackson. “Each bowler who brings in a coat or article of clothing, like a thermal shirt or underwear, will receive a strip of jacket or article of clothing, like a thermal shirt or underwear, will receive a strip of tournament raffle tickets. We hope this effort makes a positive impact on the lives of local LGBTQ youth who are in the greatest of need.”

Once the tournament is completed, top rankings will be determined for each individual category as well as optional divisions with prizes and awards distributed at an awards banquet Sunday evening.

MIC is a member tournament for the International Gay Bowling Organization (IGBO), the largest international gay and lesbian sports organization in the world. IGBO boasts more than 5,000 members in the U.S., Canada and Australia, with plans to expand its presence to several European countries.
Michigan For Marriage Announces New Co-Chairs

BY BTL STAFF

Any day now, the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals will release the decision that will determine marriage equality for four U.S. states. In the midst of this anticipation, a bipartisan group of respected state leaders has stepped forward to be Co-Chairs of Michigan for Marriage, the state’s marriage equality campaign.

Michigan for Marriage launched in May as a public education campaign and aims to broaden the marriage conversation across the state, showcase the diversity of Michiganders who support marriage equality and send a message that Michigan is ready for marriage.

The Right Reverend Wendell N. Gibbs, Jr., the 10th Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Michigan; Congressman Dan Kildee; former Republican Speaker of the House Chuck Perricone; and AFL-CIO President Karla Swift will join as co-chairs and help push the mission of Michigan for Marriage forward.

“Same-sex couples love each other, raise children and support their families no differently than opposite-sex couples,” Swift said. “The government’s refusal to recognize these relationships deprives thousands of Michigan families the ability to take care of and provide for their family members.”

In a poll released in March by the Washington Post, 59 percent of Americans are now in favor of allowing same-sex couples to marry. Bipartisan support is strong in the push for marriage equality with a New York Times/CBS News poll that found 56 percent of Republicans under the age of 45 support marriage equality.

“I’m proud to stand with the majority of Michiganders in favor of equal rights for loving couples in our state, and I look forward to the day – hopefully real soon – where our nation’s laws that discriminate against gays and lesbians are tossed aside,” Kildee said. “Everyone’s love should be recognized and equal.”

With an amendment to Elliott-Larsen being debated in Lansing, the country waits to hear the results from marriage equality court cases and from the upcoming election in November, where Michigan will have a chance to elect two LGBT members into the state House.

“In my opinion, picking and choosing whose rights should be protected or which civil rights the church will support is neither American ‘justice for all’ nor supported by the God of salvation history,” Gibbs said. “I stand in support of marriage equality and pray that our justice system will work to break down the walls of segregation, promote the humanity of all and calm our irrational fears.”

Co-Chair

Bishop Wendell N. Gibbs is the 10th Bishop of Michigan’s Episcopal Diocese. He received his B.A. in Business Administration from Towson State University in 1977 and graduated in 1987 with a Master’s in Divinity from Seabury-Western Theological Seminary. Gibbs has been with his wife, Karlah Abrose York, for 25 years. Gibbs, who currently lives in Southeastern Michigan, is a strong supporter of marriage equality for all of God’s children and looks forward to a day when all faith and covenantal relationships between any two people are recognized within the society and the church.

Congressman Dan Kildee represents Michigan’s 5th District and is a lifelong Michigan resident. He served three decades as an elected official in Genesee County. In his 1977 election to the Flint Board of Education, Kildee became one of the youngest elected officials in the nation. He has spent 24 years with his wife Jennifer, and they currently reside in Flint Township.

Former Speaker of the House Chuck Perricone served on the House of Representatives from 1995 to 2000 and was Speaker during his final term. He is the founder and CEO of the Perricone Group, and he advises corporate, business and education leaders. He is the publisher of Dome Magazine, which provides readers with a local understanding of what’s happening in Michigan’s public policy. Perricone believes in family, freedom and the fundamental idea that each person’s dignity, liberty, ability and responsibility must be honored.

AFL-CIO President Karla Swift is a rank-and-file member of UAW Local 483 and worker at General Motors. She served as State Director of We Are the People – a diverse coalition of students, seniors and laborers fighting to protect Michigan’s middle class. Swift has devoted her life to making sure workers are able to provide for their families, citing the labor movement’s dedication to equality and fairness for all people. She proudly voiced her support for the efforts of the Michigan for Marriage coalition. She lives in Livonia with her husband of 37 years, Mike.

RELATED STORIES

See BTL’s reporting (p. 6-7) on the Oct. 6 U.S. Supreme Court decision to not take any of the marriage cases on appeal and what it may mean for Michigan’s marriage case.

If you bet more than you can afford to lose, you’ve got a problem. Call 1-800-270-7117 for free, confidential help.

MotorCity Casino Hotel and MotorCity Casino Hotel design are trademarks of Detroit Entertainment, L.L.C. ©2014 Detroit Entertainment, L.L.C. All rights reserved.
Icon On Her Legacy, The ‘Nostalgia’ Of Youth & Why Beyoncé Is ‘Feminist Lite’

BY CHRIS AZZOPARDI

They don’t make hearts bigger than the one beating inside of Annie Lennox. Despite the icon’s legendary recording career, dating back to the late ’70s, music has taken a backseat to another passion: people. While still dedicated to philanthropic work focused on causes like HIV/AIDS and global peace, the singer-songwriter returns with her first disc in four years, a covers album called “Nostalgia.”

On the heels of its release, Lennox called from London for a frank conversation about loathing her “gender bender” label, the reframing of feminism (Beyoncé is “feminist lite,” she says) and being uneasy with the superficiality of the music business.

During a recent Q&A in London, you mentioned that you stopped writing because, and I quote you, “I’m too happy.”

I said a lot of things that night! To be honest, looking back on being creative and what that was about and where the impulse lies to express yourself – there was a lot of darkness in my life. For everyone, we have our own darkness and our light, and I even wrote about that. You know, I’ve been through a lot. It’s coming up on my sixth decade now, and I have less of the impulse to express myself in that way. I feel as if I express myself very well in other ways. I branched out, you know? Since I started campaigning a decade ago, I’ve got this need to voice myself and place myself into a certain kind of activism. I find that so inspiring and such a great thing to do, but for the last year I’ve also decided, “OK, I wanna make some music and that is ‘Nostalgia.’” So, I haven’t been able to be as proactive (philanthropically) this year as I normally am. I’m one of those people who, when I do something, I have to do it all the way.

You mention “the darkness,” something you seem to have been attracted to for a good part of your musical career, and also one of the reasons people are drawn to you. I don’t know if I’m attracted to darkness. I couldn’t say “attracted.” I pick up on that because it is interesting, isn’t it? Maybe we are drawn to it. Maybe it’s already a prerequisite within ourselves. I mean, humans have this capacity to be so joyful and so full of love, and... sweet and light and all of those innocent things – like when you see children, you see how we are before we become adolescents, and we’re different.

I see children every day because they pass my house as they go to play in the park – 6 year olds who are skipping, and they’re dancing and they’re singing and they’re playing together. If you saw adults doing that, you’d think they were mad – you’d think they were completely bonkers! That joy should be our inheritance, but a lot of that gets hammered out of us, I think, because the world is a fucking dark place – excuse my French – but it truly, truly is. But there’s also beauty in it.

It sounds like you’ve found a lot of beauty in your own life lately. Why not write a joyous album?

(Laughs) Eh. It’s funny; it’s really strange. You’re talking about this thing called the “muse” in a way. There’s something called the muse that people refer to – writers and poets – and I don’t know what that is. It’s kind of an urge, an itch you have to scratch, and right now I’m very inspired – truly inspired – and this album for me has been an absolute pleasure and a real joy. I love the songs. I love the music. I love translating them into my own kind of arrangements and sounds.

Recently, when we went to LA, I made nine really amazing performance videos with this wonderful filmmaker, Natalie Johns, and I’m so proud of what Natalie has done with me collaboratively. I think it’s beautiful, and I’m a bit like, “Wow, getting the chance to still do this, it’s great.” Like I said, I struggle a lot. And life – it just never stops being interesting in a way.

While we’re talking about life and “Nostalgia,” what about your own life makes you feel nostalgic?

If I look back at my own life, it goes right back to the ’50s. I was 6 years old when it turned into 1960, you see, so I still have very strong memories of my childhood in Scotland – my upbringing, how that was. There was a lot of hardship, and my background – I don’t come from a silver spoon. It was never handed to me. It was working class, and you had to work damn hard; I’m talking about my parents and their grandparents before them.

I remember a time when there were hardly any motor cars on the road. I remember the man coming to light the gas lights on the street. Stuff like this – it’s really nostalgic. I don’t want to go back, obviously. Anyway, one can’t. There is no turning back, but sometimes I just kind of yearn for a gentler time. I say it was “gentler,” but looking back through “Nostalgia,” through this American Songbook, I also understand that going back to the ’30s in the United States and in so many parts of the world – this is pre-civil rights, before the movement had really got up and running. It’s like the voice of the civil rights movement was not being really acknowledged and the platform wasn’t as big as it became through Martin Luther King and all the work of these incredible activists.

If you think about it, it’s really not that long since people were in the closet about gay rights. It’s been extraordinary. I think that it’s accelerating in the West. I think that things are changing radically, and some things – many things – for the good. Other things I think will be challenging for people because now we have a whole new paradigm and it’s complex, as human beings are. There will be upsides and there will be downsides, and it won’t just be heaven on a stick.

Because you’ve always embraced your LGBT audience, your music has been a safe place for many people who identify as such. What do you attribute to the loyalty of your gay fan base?

You see, that’s a question you have to ask the people that you’re describing. I can’t answer for the gay community. I truly can’t. I just make music, and I have no idea who is going to listen to it. I’m just the person that I am.

When I was given this label of “gender bender,” I really felt it was diminishing in a way. It was very simplistic. I wasn’t bending gender; I was making a statement in a kind of subtle way. I thought it was subtle, but to some people it might have seemed overt. I was saying, “Look, as a woman I can be equal to a man,” and in this partnership with the Eurythmics, where I was in a partnership with a man (Dave Stewart), the two of us felt so connected that my gender didn’t matter. In a funny sort of way, ultimately I was coming out to say, “Look, I’m not going to be what you think I am. I’m intelligent. I’m not a dancing doll just because I’m female and I’m singing. I’m not singing for your pleasurable entertainment. It’s not about that. It’s cerebral and it’s heartfelt and it’s intelligent.”

This is something I’ve been saying to a lot of my gay compadres: One day we’ll get rid of this word “gay,” because it’s irrelevant. Of course it’s terribly relevant when you are trying to create a campaign. During a human rights movement, it’s terribly important to have labels and to have platforms that are very identifiable, but ultimately we should just be fine with everybody no matter what our sexual orientation is. It’s nobody’s effing business.

Our use of labels is evolving. So many people are resisting them or calling themselves “queer” because it’s a broader term.

Even that – no. It’s diminishing. Broaden out. And it will come.

As a longtime feminist, how do you feel about the way the term “feminist” has been reframed in contemporary culture?

It’s a process. It continues to be reframed, and necessarily so, because people’s relationship to the word has been a bit ambivalent over the last few decades. According to who you speak to, they don’t sometimes quite know what to do with the word. I did one event in particular called (Barclays) Women of the Year and they select certain people for certain kinds of recognition, and I was given an award not so long ago. I was so touched to have this award. I felt like I’m with a certain kind of camaraderie here and we’re all together in this room – 400 women from all walks of life – and I said at the podium, “I’m proud to be a feminist; let’s everybody stand up.” Half of the room stayed seated. It was such a hard moment for me because I realized that some women, many women, still have issues with the word and almost distance themselves from it because they’re afraid it’s synonymous with hating men.

Which is something you don’t believe to be true, right?

Not at all. I think that what happened over the years, and quite rightly so, is that women had to be incredibly radical, stringent and strident about the voice of feminism. They had to do that, but I think that nowadays it’s a more subtle thing. But we need men to be onboard with us. That’s my view. Some women might disagree with me. I’m not saying I hold the key to the absolute truth – I’m not saying that at all – but I also feel very much that the LGBTQ movement and the women’s movement need to get together far more frequently because we’re coming from the same place of human rights and civil rights.

So what do you make of someone like Beyoncé? She recently performed on the MTV Video Music Awards and proclaimed herself a “feminist” during her set.

I would call that “feminist lite.” L-T-E. I’m sorry. It’s tokenistic to me. I mean, I hold the absolute truth – I’m not saying that at all – but I’ve been a bit ambivalent over the last few decades. According to who you speak to, they sometimes quite know what to do with the word. I did one event in particular called (Barclays) Women of the Year and they select certain people for certain kinds of recognition, and I was given an award not so long ago. I was so touched to have this award. I felt like I’m with a certain kind of camaraderie here and we’re all together in this room – 400 women from all walks of life – and I said at the podium, “I’m proud to be a feminist; let’s everybody stand up.” Half of the room stayed seated. It was such a hard moment for me because I realized that some women, many women, still have issues with the word and almost distance themselves from it because they’re afraid it’s synonymous with hating men.

Which is something you don’t believe to be true, right?

Not at all. I think that what happened over the years, and quite rightly so, is that women had to be incredibly radical, stringent and strident about the voice of feminism. They had to do that, but I think that nowadays it’s a more subtle thing. But we need men to be onboard with us. That’s my view. Some women might disagree with me. I’m not saying I hold the key to the absolute truth – I’m not saying that at all – but I also feel very much that the LGBTQ movement and the women’s movement need to get together far more frequently because we’re coming from the same place of human rights and civil rights.

So what do you make of someone like Beyoncé? She recently performed on the MTV Video Music Awards and proclaimed herself a “feminist” during her set.

I would call that “feminist lite.” L-T-E. I’m sorry. It’s tokenistic to me. I mean, I hold the absolute truth – I’m not saying that at all – but I also feel very much that the LGBTQ movement and the women’s movement need to get together far more frequently because we’re coming from the same place of human rights and civil rights.

So what do you make of someone like Beyoncé? She recently performed on the MTV Video Music Awards and proclaimed herself a “feminist” during her set.

I would call that “feminist lite.” L-T-E. I’m sorry. It’s tokenistic to me. I mean, I hold the absolute truth – I’m not saying that at all – but I also feel very much that the LGBTQ movement and the women’s movement need to get together far more frequently because we’re coming from the same place of human rights and civil rights.

So what do you make of someone like Beyoncé? She recently performed on the MTV Video Music Awards and proclaimed herself a “feminist” during her set.

I would call that “feminist lite.” L-T-E. I’m sorry. It’s tokenistic to me. I mean, I hold the absolute truth – I’m not saying that at all – but I also feel very much that the LGBTQ movement and the women’s movement need to get together far more frequently because we’re coming from the same place of human rights and civil rights.
Annie Lennox
Continued from p. 17

them; I’d like to hear what they truly think.
I see a lot of it as them taking the word hostage and using it to promote themselves, but I don’t think they necessarily represent wholeheartedly the depths of feminism – no, I don’t. I think for many it’s very convenient and it looks great and it looks radical, but I have some issues with it. I have issues with it. Of course I do. I think it’s a cheap shot. I think what they do with it is cheap and... yeah. What can I tell you? Sex always sell. And there’s nothing wrong with sex selling, but it depends on your audience. If they’re 7-year-old kids, I have issues with it.

For years, you’ve resisted the “celebrity” moniker. You don’t like to think of yourself as that.

No, I don’t. Again, I feel quite diminished by it. Obviously, I’m sometimes given that moniker, but every time it happens I feel reduced by it. I cringe inside.

When somebody sees you on the street and reacts to you in the way some people react to a “celebrity,” how does that make you feel then?

It depends on how it’s done. Sometimes people are so, so sweet and it’s so touching, and it’s very human because they approach me in a way where I don’t feel uncomfortable. It’s just a human exchange. Of course I try to just go in the street and be like everybody else. I’ve always done that. I don’t want to be singled out, but of course being a person in the public eye, from time to time, you will be. People will see the projection that they know you to be. In that sense, I’m who I am as a person and I’m also this projection for people, so I cannot be tough on people that recognize me because I’ve been doing this for years now. The only time when it becomes incredibly uncomfortable is when people are just a bit thoughtless and invade in such a way where they really don’t think. They kind of treat you like a species in a safari park, and really, it’s awful. It’s so terrible.

Camera phones haven’t made things any better in that regard, have they?

I think it’s far worse when people are paid to steal your image. They pay money for that stolen image of you and you have no control over it – but they’re making money out of it! I mean, I haven’t played into that paparazzi thing – I’ve just tried to completely and utterly downplay it – but you can play it up if you want. You can have them following you 24/7 if you want that kind of life. Some people do. I mean, bizarrely, people seem to want it. I’ve never understood why.

Is it true that you may never write again and that this may be your last album?

Who knows. I don’t know. I say this because I’m aware that I’m not a young person, but I’m so spirited in myself – it’s really strange. Just because I’m almost 60 now, it doesn’t mean that I’m less passionate or less intensely curious about the world around me. In fact, I’m even more curious about it in another kind of way.

There’s this youth culture that is really, really powerful and really, really strong, but what it does is it really discards people once they reach a certain age. I actually think that people are so powerful and interesting – women, especially – when they reach my age. We’ve got so much to say, but popular culture is so reductive that we just talk about whether we’ve got wrinkles, or whether we’ve put on weight or lost weight, or whether we’ve changed our hair style. I just find that so shallow. Because it’s a shallow place, it’s one of the reasons the music industry and the music scene is really not truly for me and never really has been.

Have you thought about the legacy you want to leave?

I can’t think about legacy. I guess if you go onto the Internet you can find many things that were created over all of these years, and I guess that is the legacy. It is the music that’s been made, the interviews, the video, the photo shoots, and there were so many creative things that happened and they’re there. I have no control over what people think about it. They may love it; they may hate it.

But your legacy is more than just music. You’re a humanitarian. It’s beyond just creating albums and making videos, right? You’re part of the bigger picture.

Well, thank you; that makes me feel complete, because to feel like an intelligent, rounded person with integrity, I don’t think that you can just be an entertainer. I think there’s another side – to me, anyway – that needs to be satisfied, and that is through contribution.

To feel like an intelligent, rounded person with integrity, I don’t think that you can just be an entertainer. I think there’s another side – to me, anyway – that needs to be satisfied, and that is through contribution.

“...to me, anyway – that needs to be satisfied, and that is through contribution.”
RAW BRUTAL VIOLENT

One of the most frequently performed operas based on classical Greek mythology: “Elektra”, the story of one woman’s bloodthirsty quest to avenge her father’s death.

The role of “Elektra” in Strauss’s classic shocker is one of the most challenging in all of opera, requiring equal doses of stamina and a dynamic vocal range. American soprano CHRISTINE GOERKE is perfectly suited for the part, direct from her stellar performances in London and Chicago.

4 Performances Only!
Tickets as low as $25!

Saturday October 18 • 7:30 PM
Wednesday October 22 • 7:30 PM
Saturday October 25 • 7:30 PM
Sunday October 26 • 2:30 PM

---

THE ART OF VIDEO GAMES

10.25.14 – 1.18.15

Take a journey through 80 video games and enjoy five additional playable games: Pac-Man, Super Mario Brothers, The Secret of Monkey Island, Myst, and Flower.

This exhibition at the Flint Institute of Arts examines the evolution of video games as an art form over the industry’s 40-year history and will highlight the influential artists during five eras of technology, from Atari VCS to the PlayStation 3.

The Art of Video Games is organized by the Smithsonian American Art Museum with generous support from the Entertainment Software Association Foundation, Shells Dugan and Mike Williams, Shelly and Frederick Gore, Mark Lamle, Gay Munro, and Greg Zeschuk; Reese Family Foundation; Betty and Lloyd Scherner; and Neil Young.

The F.I.A. Foundation in Atlanta supports the museum’s traveling exhibition program, Treasures to Go.

---

“Best Investment we’ve ever made!”

How? By giving you:
- Guaranteed Energy Savings
- Up to 10 Year Parts & Labor Warranty
- Whisper Quiet and reliable
- Greater Comfort
- Increased Property value

The Best for Last

We hear it a lot. Many customer’s wish they’d replace their old heating and cooling systems sooner!

You may think a new system is “too much” until you realize your old system’s real cost.

Just like an old car may be cheap, but after adding repairs, unreliability, and poor mileage, is it worth it? The same is true for a heating and cooling system’s real cost.

Can pay for itself, plus more!

A new system from Hinson Home Comfort can save you money, time, and trouble.

(248) 541-7007
Hear Me Out

Melissa Etheridge, Lee Ann Womack

By Chris Azzopardi

Melissa Etheridge, ‘This Is M.E.’

Since going indie, Melissa Etheridge must be feeling as free as when she first came out gay two decades ago. Throughout the punny, super-charged “This Is M.E.,” the loose feels of liberation are ever-present as the lesbian icon gets her feet wet in foreign waters (2010’s “Fearless Love” suggested experimental restlessness). But when you team up with Jerry “Wonda” Duplessis, producer of the Fugees, and RoccStar, who’s laid down tracks for Usher and Chris Brown, you don’t get straight-up rock ‘n’ roll; you get smatterings of R&B and soul. Considering this is the same scorned woman who bit into “Bring Me Some Water,” a song like “A Little Hard Hearted,” with its full-on sing-along pop hook, is initially jarring. A few listens later and you’ve got that thing on replay. Then there’s the flirty, seemingly autobiographical “Take My Number,” which rumbles with the rock-lite flair of her commercial ’90s-era zenith. Come chorus, a catchy “drink / think” rhyme makes it so convincing, so irresistible, you won’t be able to help yourself – you’d better take that number. With vexed kiss-off “Ain’t That Bad” and the soaring Wonda-influenced “Monster,” and even the raging “ Stranger Road,” Etheridge maintains her essence, but she’s also wearing many different hats. They don’t always fit – the rambling “Who Are You Waiting For?” is Melissa’s faltering attempt at a mushy power ballad – but sometimes finding the right one takes a few tries. Grade: B-

Lee Ann Womack, ‘The Way I’m Livin’’

Lee Ann Womack’s mega-ballad “I Hope You Dance,” your mom’s favorite song, and the sleek crossover LP “Something Worth Leaving Behind” thrust her into the mainstream, but, at heart, Lee Ann Womack was always more of a country girl. Reveling in the traditional Southern sounds she’d eventually pursue, the Grammy winner’s first album in seven years – a grower – is a roots-based disc centered on down-homeness, heartbreak and devil worship. Most reminiscent of her pop-country phase, “Same Kind of Different” imparts a ties-that-bind sentiment as its a cappella opening cases into a drum-driven, fiddle-strung ditty. “The Way I’m Livin’,” the title track, leans closer to the deep Texan twang of ominous, snake-slitherin’ badassery. “If I ever get to heaven, it’s a doggone shame,” Womack sings, sounding as fiery as the flames she’s dancing in. “Don’t Listen to the Wind” sends a simple guitar into a tornado of sonic madness. It’s a satisfying adrenaline rush. Womack, who’s even better at fragile laments, could dry out a drenched towel with piano tearjerker “Send It on Down,” an inspiring ode to getting your shit together. Not every song on “The Way I’m Livin’” reaches that caliber of melody and poignancy, but the album’s still like having a devil on your back. Some of it’s just so hard to shake. Grade: B-

Also Out

Lady Gaga and Tony Bennett, ‘Cheek to Cheek’

After the dire non-success of Lady Gaga’s “ARTPOP,” it was time for Mother Monster to take a step back. Arm in arm with Tony Bennett, she does just that on “Cheek to Cheek,” harkening back to the old-timey jazz classics of Cole Porter, Irving Berlin and Duke Ellington. It won’t do anything to advance Gaga’s career, and the 88-year-old Bennett’s legendary status is obviously already well established, but there are moments of undeniable sweetness on an otherwise dull venture, where the sole purpose seems to be bridging the gap between gays and grandpas.

Lucinda Williams, ‘Down Where the Spirit Meets the Bone’

In a singles-driven industry with less interest in the full-album format, it’s ambitious of Lucinda Williams to release two of them at the same time. The alt-country icon’s 11th outing, a music purist’s dream, is a double-disc set steeped in Williams’ signature line-blurring. From country to blues and folk and rock, “Down Where the Spirit Meets the Bone” encompasses it all. Its biggest feat: never feeling as long as its actual runtime. With music this powerful, even 103 minutes is too short.
BY MIKEY ROX

There’s more to autumn than apple pie and pumpkin spice that. One of the best things about fall, in fact, is that we get to unpack the sweaters, scarves and other cool-weather clothing (most of us anyway), which provide many more outfit options than we have during summer.

Sure, there’s plenty to be said about the lack of layers when the mercury is at its peak, but the latter months of the year have their own perks – like dapper dudes in button-downs, blazers and kick-ass boots. Now you can join the club – quite literally – and step up your own style this fall with these subscription services that bring fresh perspective to your wardrobe, delivered direct to your door.

1. Five Four Club

If you’ve ever wanted a personal stylist to help you look your best even though you’re on a budget, Five Four Club may just be your materialistic messiah. The service – which if you do the math equals a “one-of-a-kind service with a one-of-a-kind value” – provides members with deep discounts on fresh duds that your closet already covets. Four distinct boxes are available – for personalities that range from “Dress to Impress” to “T-Shirt and Jeans” – the cost of which is less than half the retail price of the items inside.

fivefourclothing.com

2. Trunk Club

For high-end clothing handpicked to reflect your personal style, Trunk Club has you covered. Unlike many of the other clothing boxes, however, this isn’t a monthly service and there’s no upfront membership fee. Rather, you can request shipments at any time, try on the surprises inside at home, and decide what suits you. Whatever you don’t like you can return, and after 10 days you’ll be charged for the items you decide to keep. Trunk Club isn’t for everyone, though; this premium service is on par with top-tier shops that offer denim, casual shirts and sweaters in the $100 to $300 per-piece range. trunkclub.com

3. Bombfell

Like other monthly boxes, Bombfell personal stylists are hard at work handpicking each item specifically for you, but you can maintain some measure of control if you’d like: You have the ability to skip the uncertainty and personally select the type of items that you’re sent, like “2 button-downs and a pair of jeans,” for instance. Once your box is prepared, you’ll be sent a preview e-mail so you can cancel or change anything you like within 48 hours of receipt. Individual pieces hover at an average of $69, and shipping is free both ways.

bombfell.com

4. Curator and Mule

Now that you’re all set with tops and bottoms, you’ll need accessories to personalize those new outfits – which is Curator and Mule’s speciality. Each season, the service discovers the hottest hats, shades, wallets and more to make you stand out from the crowd. Four or five pieces are then packed into a box and sent your way for $60 per season with an option to sit one out. Past brands have included private labels like Wovenn, UrbanCow and Evolution Man.

curatorandmule.com

5. Zoraab

Give your feet a pick-me-up with funky-fresh socks from Zoraab, a monthly subscription service that lets you customize your experience until your piggies are... content. Choose your socks from four broad categories ("Laid Back," "Fashion Statement," "Strictly Business," and "Walk on the Wild Side"), then choose the number of socks you'd like to receive every month, from two to five pair. Gift subscriptions also are available for the fashionistas on your list. zoraab.com

7. Underwear Society
You'll love gettin' your undies in a bunch when they're sent from Underwear Society, a subscription service that sends four pairs of skivvies once a month or as a one-off purchase. Designate your favorite brand from one of three choices – Kings and Jaxs, Stonemen, or XVII (or let the Society mix it up for you); pick your favorite cut (brief, boxer brief or trunk); and select your size. Prices vary based on brand, which range from the very affordable $18 per shipment to a more competitive $40 a box. underwearsociety.com

8. Bespoke Post
If you're a gambling man, Bespoke Post could be in your cards. This box club features several different themes from which to choose – focusing on accessories, personal grooming and more – that you’ll get to peek at on the first of every month via e-mail. You can “skip it, swap it, or let it ride,” and if you choose one of the latter two options you’ll be billed the $45 per-box fee when the goods ship around the 5th of the month. bespokepost.com

9. FreshNeck
The guys at the office will start to envy your professional style (assuming they don’t already, of course) with a subscription to FreshNeck, which bills itself as the “Netflix for Ties.” For all intents and purposes, that’s an accurate description of this service that lets you fill your virtual closet with dozens of ties, bow ties, pocket squares and cufflinks, the top available items of which will arrive on your doorstep within one to three business days. Wear the items as long as you want, or send them back frequently to receive new items. Membership starts at $20 per month, shipping is free both ways, and there are never any late fees. freshneck.com

Mikey Rox is an award-winning journalist and blogger whose work has been published in more than 100 outlets across the world. He lives in Manhattan with his husband and their cuddle-buddy furbaby. Connect with Mikey on Twitter @mikeyrox.
MURRAY & PETER PRESENT
I’M A PORNSTAR

BRENT EVERETT
COLBY JANSEN
GIA DARLING
JOHNNY RAPID
ROCCO REED

A DOCUMENTARY FILM ABOUT THE GAY XXX INDUSTRY

ONE NIGHT ONLY @ 8PM
THUR OCT 23
MAIN ART THEATRE
118 N. Main, Royal Oak MI 48067. 248-542-5198

EXCLUSIVE MICHIGAN PREMIERE. ON SALE NOW WWW.NEPTIX.COM

Warning: Adult Content. Must Be 18 To Enter. Watch The Trailer On Youtube.

MurrayandPeter Present #mppresent @mppresent
BY JENN MCKEE

A Bloody Fun Night Of Theater

Remember, not only does Moan have to ability are truly tremendous. Plus, time – so to speak – and his vocal delivery and sense of timing
hilarious delivery and sense of timing
particularly when weighed against all the
during “Good Ol’ Reliable Jake.”
intermittently drowned out by the music is otherwise wholly enjoyable – was now, and whose performance in the show
“Evil Dead: The Musical” continues at the City Theatre through Oct. 25. Photo: The Ringwald Theatre

“Evil Dead: The Musical”

The Ringwald Theatre & Olympia
Entertainment
at City Theatre
2301 Woodward Ave., Detroit
8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 9, 16, 23
8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 10, 17, 24
5 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 11, 18, 25
Contains adult language and themes
$29.50
313-471-6611
www.olympiaentertainment.com

This gets at one thing (of many) that makes “Evil Dead” fun: The cast seems to
be having a fantastic time with the show and each other, and that translates to
the crowd. After Richard Payton, playing
oppressed research assistant Ed, delivered
a really entertaining rendition of “Bit Part Demon,” he was supposed to be shot and killed; but lying on his stomach, his body
covalesed with giggles over what was happening on stage – and this is precisely
the kind of show in which a glimpse behind
the curtain is not only acceptable, but adds to
the laughs.

But speaking of the show’s messiness,
I’ve just realized that I failed to mention
the “splatter” rows in the theater, wherein
about a dozen rows in the center section
are covered with garbage bags, and patrons
are warned that if they sit there, they may
well get fake blood on them, and they may not be able to wash it off of their clothes.
I’ve just realized that I failed to mention
the “splatter” rows in the theater, wherein
about a dozen rows in the center section
are covered with garbage bags, and patrons
are warned that if they sit there, they may
well get fake blood on them, and they may not be able to wash it off of their clothes.

Yet these are relatively small quibbles,
particularly when weighed against all the tings “Evil Dead” gets right. Chief among them is Moan, who plays the puffe-up camp icon Ash to near-perfection. His hilarious delivery and sense of timing
are dead-on – so to speak – and his vocal abilities are truly tremendous. Plus,
remember, not only does Moan have to beat himself up with his own hand, which he does quite capably, but also, because “Evil Dead” films are a beloved cult staple,
the actors have to respond when audience
members anticipate lines and yell things out, as if attending a “Rocky Horror” screening. In Moan’s case, on Friday, after the crowd joined him in saying, in reference to his raised rifle, “This is my boomstick,” a patron said, “S Mart, top of the line,” and Moan responded, “I’m getting there.”

This gets at one thing (of many) that
makes “Evil Dead” fun: The cast seems to
be having a fantastic time with the
show and each other, and that translates to
the crowd. After Richard Payton, playing
oppressed research assistant Ed, delivered
a really entertaining rendition of “Bit Part Demon,” he was supposed to be shot and
killed; but lying on his stomach, his body
covalesed with giggles over what was happening on stage – and this is precisely
the kind of show in which a glimpse behind
the curtain is not only acceptable, but adds to
the laughs.

Todd, meanwhile, clearly relishes
playing Ash’s horny, foul-mouthed best friend – his bro-tango with Ash, “What the F Was That,” is a highlight – and Becker delivers on two roles: Scott’s
eager sex toy Shelly and the archeologist’s dughter (whose clothes keep getting ripped off), Annie.

Tommy LeRoy’s hunting lodge set design – and one should note that pretty much everything placed there will be used at some point during the show – must look real while also being able to withstand being splattered with loads of fake blood nightly, plus many, many other tricky technical demands. Alex Gay’s lights, whether they create a red glow
outside the window, or pulse to signal
the demons’ return, are a key element of the production’s storytelling. Bailey
Boudreau designed costumes that must,
in a couple of cases, tear away, as well as
withstand gallons of fake blood nightly
(a 21-gun salute to stage manager Holly
Garverick for handling the messy stage and costume clean-up duties). Jeff Bobick is the show’s music director, and Allyson Smith designed the cheeky choreography (right down to the “Thriller” moves near the end).

But speaking of the show’s messiness,
I’ve just realized that I failed to mention
the “splatter” rows in the theater, wherein
about a dozen rows in the center section
are covered with garbage bags, and patrons
are warned that if they sit there, they may
well get fake blood on them, and they may not be able to wash it out of their clothes.
It’s telling that most of the people who chose to sit in the splatter section sat in the front row. The people who really love “Evil Dead,” the true fans, seem to be all in. But even if, like me, you’re a newbie to this offbeat world, you’ll still likely find it all to be bloody fun.
Who Will Fight To Legalize Our Marriage?

LGBT

MIVoterGuide.com

Your roadmap to a progressive Michigan.

This October, simply enter your zip code at MIVoterGuide.com and discover who will fight for LGBT equality and other progressive causes at the local and statewide level. Then November 4, head to the polls with your personal voter guide and help move Michigan forward.
Rainbow Book Club: 4:30 p.m. Book club dedicated to reading and discussing classic and contemporary lesbian, gay, bisexual, transsexual and queer literature. Meeting since before 1998, every second Sunday of the month. Rainbow Book Club, 319 Braun St., Ann Arbor, 734-995-9867. Catherine.herne@gmail.com

Ballroom Dance Classes: 6-5:15 p.m. All are welcome—singles, couples, LGBT, Allies. Anyone can learn to lead or follow! Tickets: $10. GOAL, 247 W. Nine Mile, Ferndale. 248-514-0330. Meetup.com/GOAL-Get-Out-And-Live-LGBT

Regardless Of (Narcotics Anonymous Anonymous Meeting): 7 p.m. This is a closed meeting for addicts or those who think they might have a drug problem. This may be a Common Needs meeting, but any addict seeking recovery is welcome! The time has come that any addict seeking recovery in the Whatwewan area can find it. The more diverse the fellowship, the more members we are able to reach! The goal is to make the message of recovery available to all so that any addict can come to NA and feel that they too belong in this fellowship! Jim Toy Community Center, 319 Braun Court, Ann Arbor, 734-995-9867. jimtoycenter.org

Drag Queen Addictions: 10:30 p.m. LaBeile and Andrea Franklin impersonator April Summers brings her big personality to the stage as she introduces a lineup of drag stars. 18+. Inuendo Nightclub, Corner of Nevada St. and Southbound I-75, Detroit. https://facebook.com/inuendo.nightclub?r=11820121607517

Monday, Oct. 13
Center Open-Door: In. 7 p.m. Jim Toy Community Center, 319 Braun Court, Ann Arbor, 734-995-9867. jimtoycenter.org

Tuesdays, Oct. 14
Aff Action Night: 6 p.m. Educating others about how to make Michigan an equality state. Pizza provided for volunteers. Affirmations, 247 W. Nine Mile Road, Ferndale. 248-398-7105. goaffirmations.org

Tuesdays, Oct. 14
Teens Using Drugs: What to Know and What To Do: 7:30 p.m. A FREE, ongoing, two-part series designed to help participants learn to understand, identify and adress adolescent alcohol/other drug problems. Dawn Farm, 5305 E. 27th, Detroit. 313-874-0909. info@staticrecords.com

Wednesday, Oct. 15

Thursday, Oct. 16

Friday, Oct. 17
Out in the Union: A Labor History of Queer America: 10:15 a.m. Special

See Happenings, page 30
Ann Arbor Drops The Bass At Edgefest

BY SHELBY CLARK PETKUS

Ann Arbor’s Kerrytown Concert House brings its annual festival dedicated to bassists on Oct. 15-18. The bass-centric event showcases new music from musicians who use the instrument known for its “full sonic and percussive possibilities.” From avant-garde to electronic, different bass styles ranging from European tradition to the Midwest style, the US East coast to the West, Edgefest will truly embody its theme: “BAS(S)ically Sound.” The musical celebration runs Oct. 15-18, with a prelude event on Oct. 14.

This year’s lineup starts with William Parker, known for his bass compositions, playing a free event at Encore Records, 417 E. Liberty St., Ann Arbor. The 8 p.m. Oct. 14 show will feature informal, improvisational music to set the stage for the festival.

Wednesday's events feature the Jaribu Shaheed Bass Quartet, the Detroit-based Shaheed leading a team of international bassists and percussionists. The event will open with a solo set by bassist, Mark Helias. The Michaël Attias Trio follows at 9 p.m., featuring the trio of alto saxophone, drums and bass.

On Thursday, Diana Gannett, Doo in the Womb with Betsy Soukup and Ben Willis, and The Andrew Bishop Project start the evening. The Jason Roechke Octet follows at 8:30 p.m. with their renowned jazz. Open Loose ends the night with a 9:30 p.m. performance featuring Helias together with Tony Malaby on tenor saxophone and clarinet, and Tom Rainey on drums.

Friday evening hosts Helias once again as he plays with bassist Mark Dresser as part of the “Marks Brothers.” The two bring homages to comedic masters through a fusion of jazz, classical, modern and experimental. At 8 p.m., Nimish and Niraj Ganatra present “Out to Lunch, The Music of Eric Dolphy: 50th Anniversary Tour.” The concert features masters of the improvisational music scene. The Harrison Bankhead Quartet brings their all-star Chicago stylings at 9:30 p.m.

Saturday showcases the final day of performances, featuring the Edgefest Parade. The free event will feature musicians and the community at large parading as they play instruments. Walkers are urged to arrive at Kerrytown Concert House around 11:30 a.m., prior to the parade. The Joel Peterson Group then plays at 2 p.m. with a Mark Dresser solo. At 4 p.m., the Ingebrigt Håker Flaten Trio perform Scandinavian jazz. Parker, who opened the festival earlier in the week, will complete Edgefest with two sets at 7 and 10 p.m. His “In Order to Survive” shows feature guests Steve Swell on trombone and Kidd Jordan on tenor sax.

Edgefest 18 begins at 6:30 p.m. Oct. 15, 7 p.m. Oct. 16-17 and 10 a.m. Oct. 18 at Kerrytown Concert House, 415 N. Fourth Ave., Ann Arbor. Tickets range from $5-30, with passes for all events available for $135. For more information, visit www.kerrytownconcerthouse.com.
Ann Arbor Cool Cities Pages

- Call Ed today: 734-293-7200 x15
- Shop Ann Arbor! Go Blue!

TWO GREAT LOCATIONS, ONE GREAT PRICE

The PoloFields Golf and Country Club

Golf outings available for the 2014 season. When hosting an outing at The Polo Fields, your guests enjoy being a “member for a day”! 18 holes of championship golf, two magnificent clubhouses, gourmet dining, elegant banquet rooms and impeccable service. We offer the perfect setting to stage a truly memorable event.

Par Outing

- Golf & Continental Breakfast
- OR
- Golf & Hot Dog, Chips & Pop

$55* per player

*Most guarantee a minimum of 40 players. Restrictions apply. Call for details.

TWO GREAT LOCATIONS

- Ann Arbor
  - www.polofieldsccmi.com
  - Contact Chris Chalmers 734.998.1555

- Washinetaw

---

Abracadabra Jewelry & Gem Gallery
Anderson, PLLC, Mary K.
Ann Arbor Animal Hospital
Ann Arbor Civic Theatre
Ann Arbor Saline Family Chiro
Ann Arbor Symphony Orchestra
The Ark
Auto Bar
Bassett & Associates
Common Language
Dependable Collision Center
Downtown Home & Garden

Esquire Interiors
First Unitarian Church of Ann Arbor
Frick, LMSW, BCD, CBT, Julie
Gail van Langen Ph.d.
Greene, LMSW, ACSW, Marge
Groom N Go
Hillers
HV/ADS Resource Center (Hair)
Humane Society of Huron Valley
Iglesia Martell Law
Jim Toy Resource Center
Lewis Jewelers
Lord of Light Lutheran Church

Men’s Yoga
Merkel Carpet One
Mitchell Gold & Bob Williams
Necto
Orion Automotive Services Inc
People’s Food Coop
Performance Network
Peterson, PLLC, Lisa J.
PFLAG Ann Arbor
Polo Fields Golf
Rock Shoppe
Rosenberg, David
Shiauj, Cabaret and Gallery

Spectrum Center
Three Chairs Co
Top of the Lamp
Trillium Real Estate
Two Men And A Truck
UMHS Comprehensive Gender Services Program
University Musical Society

Not shown on map

---

Orion Automotive Services

101 Parkland Plaza
Ann Arbor, MI 48103

(734) 995-3188
www.orion2.com

LOVIN’ ANN ARBOR CARS SINCE ’94

---

Tios Mexican Cafe
Top of the Lamp
Trillium Real Estate
Two Men And A Truck
UMHS Comprehensive Gender Services Program

---

IT’S LEAF BLOWING SEASON

---

LEWIS JEWELERS

YOUR DIAMOND STORE

2000 W Stadium Blvd. Ann Arbor, MI 48103
lewisjewelers.com

---

Oct. 9, 2014 | BTL 29
Drag Queen Bingo 10 p.m. A fun alternative to your usual weekend hot spots. Shows get out just early enough for you to hit the local clubs or bars! Refreshments from our full coffee bar (coffees, teas, smoothies), sodas, water, and more. Tickets: $20. 18+. Fev15, 515 S. Washington Ave., Royal Oak. 248-515-2951. Fev15.net

MUSIC & MORE

Benefit/Sozial Events

The Ark “Blackthorn ACS CAN Fundraiser” Tickets: $25. The Ark, 316 S. Main St., Ann Arbor. 7:30 p.m. Oct. 12. 734-761-1800. Theark.org

Chamber Music Society of Detroit

Chamber Music Society of Detroit

“Julliard String Quartet” Tickets: $10-60. Seligman Performing Arts Center, Oakland University, 2200 S. Nottawa Road, Rochester. Oct. 11-12, 248-370-2030. Chambermusicedetroit.org

Chamber Music Society of Detroit

“Chamber Music Society of Detroit at Oakland University” . Varner Recital Hall, Oakland University, 2200 N. Squirrel Road, Rochester. Oct. 12-14, 248-370-2030. Chambermusicedetroit.org

Ottawa Symphony Orchestra

The Magic Bag

The Pike Room

Civic/Community Theater

Editor’s Pick

As part of the 36th Annual North American Labor History Conference, Professor Miriam Frank will host a talk on her book, “Out in the Union: A Labor History of Queer America.” The theme of this year’s conference centers around “The Nature of Work.” According to the event’s website, “This conference intends to expand those horizons through investigating the multi-fold meanings of ‘nature’ from a wide range of disciplinary and interdisciplinary perspectives.” The book talk will run from 10:15-11:45 a.m. on Friday, Oct. 17 in the McGregor Room B/C at Wayne State University in Detroit. The entire conference will run from Oct. 16-18. For more information, visit www.nalhc.wayne.edu.
Perpetually angry comedian Lewis Black comes to East Lansing this weekend. The Grammy award-winning comic has a history of lambasting anti-LGBT people and groups (like Barilla).

Black’s live performances “provide a cathartic release of anger and disillusionment for his audience.” As part of his “The Rant is Due” tour, the comedian will make the audience laugh with him and also at themselves. Lewis Black will perform at 7 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 12 at the Wharton Center’s Cobb Great Hall, 750 E. W. Shaw Lane, East Lansing. Tickets are $25-39.50. For more information, visit www.whartoncenter.com.
Q Puzzle

From A Modern Family Episode

Across
1 Stones halted
6 Where they yell “Cut!”
10 Kunis of “Black Swan”
14 Tease
15 Tori who sang “I am not from your tribe”
16 With mouth wide open
17 Start of a frustrated cry from Cameron to Mitchell
18 More of the cry
20 ___ buco
21 Patty Hearst’s former org.
22 Out-and-out
23 NCAA home of the Bruins

Down
1 “A one and ___ ...”
2 “Ixnay” and “No way”
3 Dolls’ companions, in a musical
4 Iffy
5 Mireille of “The Killing”
6 Start of a frustrated cry from Cameron to Mitchell
65 Playwright Orton
67 Pronto on “ER”
68 Tatum of “The Bad News Bears”
69 “___ she blows!”
70 Staying power, on Broadway
71 Former NFL player Tuakau

4 1847 Melville novel
5 Adds some muscle to
9 Fast flier, briefly
10 Cocktail for the “Octopussy” star
11 “___ Rhythm”
12 Hilary Swank’s husband Chad
13 It gets a get hard
19 Run smoothly
21 Patty Hearst’s former org.
24 “Bewitched” aunt
25 Sphere start
26 Prefix with butch or right-wing
27 More of the cry
28 Finish with
29 Diana’s accessory
30 “___ Casey
32 Profix with but or right-wing
33 Become an open pansy, e.g.
36 Gets wind of
37 Spills one’s seed
40 Mireille of “The Killing”
41 Do pioneer work
44 Top, to a bottom?
46 Gets back in business
49 They help bakers get it up
50 High-speed connection
52 Bruin Bobby
54 Slap a bottom
55 Stage crew worker, briefly
56 Big name in razors
58 Web info source
60 voyeur’s confession?
61 Peter, for one
62 Ward of “Once and Again”
64 Night school subj.
65 Playwright Orton

Solution on pg. 25

Classifieds

320 EMPLOYMENT - WANTED

Event Coordinator in Training
Company: Roostertail
Job Description: Applicant will conduct office administrative tasks and work with Sales Team to move towards a full time sales position.
Requirements or Qualifications: Office level computer competency, excellent grammar and letter drafting skills, good people skills, how to apply.
Please email, fax, or hand deliver cover letter and resume addressed to: Carl Ghigliazza, Roostertail, 100 Marquette Dr., Detroit, MI 48214; p. (313) 822-1234, f. (313) 822-7988; Email: Carl@Roostertail.com

428 PROF. SERVICES - MASSAGE

GROUP MASSAGE
For Gay and Bisexual Men. Learn some massage techniques and meet others in a safe and caring environment. Tuesdays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. Thursdays at 2 p.m. $10 per session. 209 West Kingsley in downtown Ann Arbor. (734) 662-6282 or email Massage4@aol.com. http://www.TryMassage.com

 massages in Ann Arbor
Meets in Ann Arbor
TUESDAYS AND SATURDAYS 6:30-7:30 PM

contact Dave at massage4@aol.com http://groups.yahoo.com/group/michigan_mens_clothing_optional_yoga
You are not alone. You can survive HIV.
Learn about free confidential testing and treatment at michigan.gov/survivehiv.
Kat Klub, presided over by a mysterious and seductive master of ceremonies. A traveling American writer, Cliff Bradshaw, finds inspiration at the Klub in the beguiling headliner Sally Boules. An avidly ambitious chanteuse, Sally seduces her way into Cliff’s bed and, ultimately, his heart. Yet not even Sally’s distraction can obviate the looming threat of the Third Reich.

Tickets are $28 and $22, and students with ID for only $10. Tickets are available by phone at 734-764-2538. The Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre is located within the Michigan League at 911 N. University Ave.

Editor’s Pick

Entertaining and thought-provoking, “Cabaret” plays at the Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre in Ann Arbor Oct. 9 and 16 at 7:30 p.m.; Oct. 10, 11, 17 and 18 at 8 p.m.; and Oct. 12 and 19 at 2 p.m.

Set in the midst of the decadent and flourishing creative culture of Weimar Berlin, the musical opens in the sodid, yet enticing cabaret, the Kit Klub, presided over by a mysterious and seductive master of ceremonies. A traveling American writer, Cliff Bradshaw, finds inspiration at the Klub in the beguiling headliner Sally Boules. An avidly ambitious chanteuse, Sally seduces her way into Cliff’s bed and, ultimately, his heart. Yet not even Sally’s distraction can obviate the looming threat of the Third Reich.

Tickets are $28 and $22, and students with ID for only $10. Tickets are available by phone at 734-764-2538. The Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre is located within the Michigan League at 911 N. University Ave.

---

Happenings

Continued from p. 31

Dexter. Oct. 11 - 12. 800-838-3066. brownpapertickets.com/event/789185

Dracula The Musical $35-41. The Dio - Dividing and Entertainment, 135 E. Main St., Pinckney. Through Nov. 1. 517-672-6009. diotheatre.com

Fridays and Saturdays at Go Comedy! Go Comedy! Improv Theater, 261 E. Nine Mile Rd., Ferndale. 248-327-0575. gocomedy.net

Improvs Mondays $5 at the door. Planet Ant Theatre, 2357 Caniff, Hamtramck. 313-365-4948. planetant.com

Macy’s Hackett’s Rat Pack Show $43-59. Macomb Center for the Performing Arts, 44575 Garfield Road, Clinton Township. 7:30 p.m. Oct. 11. 586-206-2222. macombcenter.com

Sid the Science Kid Live: Let’s Play $15-35. Miller Auditorium, 2200 Auditorium Dr., Kalamazoo. 6:30 p.m. Oct. 9. 269-387-2300. millerauditorium.com

Spencers: Theatre of Illusion $15-30. Macomb Center for the Performing Arts, 44575 Garfield Road, Clinton Township. 3 p.m. Oct. 12. 586-206-2222. macombcenter.com

The Gravedigger, A Frankenstein Story $15-35. Williamston Theatre, 122 S. Putnam Road, Williamston. Through Nov. 2. 517-565-SHOW. williamstontheatre.org

The Signal: A Doo Wop Rhapsody $25. The Acorn Theater, 107 Generations Dr., Three Oaks. 8 p.m. Oct. 17. 269-343-2727. farmersalleytheatre.com

The Tale of a Tub $15-25. The Acorn Theater, 107 Generations Dr., Three Oaks. 8 p.m. Oct. 17. 269-343-2727. farmersalleytheatre.com

Snyder is wasting your tax dollars

FIGHTING A LAWSUIT THAT IS BUILT ON A FOUNDATION OF DISCRIMINATION.

That money should be put into our community schools or investing in our crumbling roads.

Paid for by the Michigan Democratic State Central Committee, 606 Townsend St., Lansing, MI 48933. Not authorized by any candidate or candidate's committee.
BEST PRICES GUARANTEED!

BRING IT BACK FOR ANY REASON
3 DAYS - 150 MILES

2015 KIA OPTIMA LX
$189 /MO
- LEASE -
$800 DOWN
36 MO. LEASE/12K MYP

2015 KIA SOUL
$199 /MO
- LEASE -
SIGN & DRIVE
36 MO. LEASE/12K MYP

2014 CHEVY CRUZE 1LT
$89* /MO
- LEASE -
$1995 DOWN
24 MO. LEASE/10K MYP

2014 CHEVY SILVERADO DOUBLE CAB LT
$154* /MO
- LEASE -
$1995 DOWN
24 MO. LEASE/10K MYP

2014 CHEVY IMPALA
$199* /MO
- LEASE -
$1995 DOWN
24 MO. LEASE/10K MYP

Feldman Kia 42235 Grand River Avenue, Novi 888-840-1663 www.FeldmanKia.com
Tennyson Chevrolet 32570 Plymouth Rd, Livonia 888-606-9057 www.TennysonChevy.com
Marty Feldman Chevrolet 42355 Grand River Ave., Novi 888-703-9638 www.martyfeldmanchevy.com

Plus tax, title and fees. With GM discount and current lease in the household. Sierra performance with trade-in. $1995 due plus security deposit. Expires 10/31/2014. Kia Motors America of Kia Motors Finance Company lease rebate, owner loyalty rebate or competitive rebates, military bonuses, and college grad all applied. 30 mo. / 12,000 mi. lease. No security deposit required. Taxes and fees are not applicable. Down payment + first payment + total due at signing. All incentives to dealer. Offer valid thru 10/31/2014.