White House Meets with Michigan LGBT Advocates
PAGE 6

What's All the Fuss About the Fourth Circuit?
PAGE 8

Trans Activist Files Lawsuit Against SVSU
PAGE 9

Our Guide to the Best LGBT Events
PAGE 19

TALES FROM Beyond the Tracksuit
JANE LYNCH CHATS BEFORE CABARET SHOW IN ANN ARBOR
JOIN US SATURDAY, MAY 7, 2016

AFFIRMATIONS PRESENTS
CASINO ROYALE

SPRING BASH 2016
MAY 7 | MGM GRAND DETROIT

All ticket levels include admission, open bar, dinner and curbside valet
General $195 • VIP $300 • Premier $500

Featuring
Hank Winchester
WDIV Consumer Investigative Reporter
As Spring Bash Emcee

Table and sponsorship information at www.goaffirmations.org/sponsors

For more information, contact Katie: kkoch@goaffirmations.org

290 W. Nine Mile | Ferndale | MI 48220 | 248-398-7105 | www.goaffirmations.org/casinoroyale
ON THE PRESIDENTIAL TRAIL

New York Primary Recap: Hillary Clinton & Donald Trump edge closer

See page 12

PET OF WEEK

See page 20

OPINION

10 Parting Glances
10 Viewpoint: Important victory for trans student rights
11 Creep of the Week: Louie Gohmert

LIFE

16 Cool Cities: Ann Arbor
19 Happenings
20 Classifieds
21 Deep Inside Hollywood
22 Puzzle and comic

CREP OF THE WEEK

The crux of Louie Gohmert’s complaint, and really the entire argument in favor of the bathroom police laws being proposed across the country, is who gets to define what a man or a woman is? Target thinks it should be up to the individual person. Gohmert thinks it should be him.

See page 11

ONLINE RESOURCES

Visit #BTLExpo
Community owned & friendly businesses can help plan any event
www.BTL WeddingExpo.com

UNDERGROUND NEWS

12 Recap: New York Primary

NEWS

4 Local news briefs
6 White House meets with MI LGBT advocates
8 What’s the big fuss about the 4th Circuit trans decision?
9 Trans activist files lawsuit against SVSU
12 Recap: New York Primary

CREATIVE

Editor in Chief
Susan Horowitz, 734.293.7200 x 12
susanhorowitz@pridesource.com

Entertainment Editor
Chris Azzopardi, 734.293.7200 x 24
chrisazzopardi@pridesource.com

Assistant Editor
Shelby Clark Petkus, shelby@pridesource.com

Calendar Editor
Shelby Clark Petkus, shelby@pridesource.com

Staff Writers
AJ Trager, ajtrager@pridesource.com

CREATIVE

Webmaster & MIS Director
Kevin Bryant, kevinbryant@pridesource.com

Contributing Writers
Charles Alexander, Michelle E. Brown, Einell Derr Adolphus, Todd Heywood, Jason Michael, Jerome Stuart Nichols, Gwendolyn Ann Smith, Christopher J. Treacy

Cartoonists
Paul Berg, Dave Brousseau

Contributing Photographers
Andrew Potter

ADVERTISING & SALES

Director of Sales
Jan Stevenson, 734.293.7200 x 22
jan@pridesource.com

Sales Representatives
Ann Cox, 734.293.7200 x 13
hammad@pridesource.com
Donelle Kremke, 734.293.7200 x 16
donelle@pridesource.com

National Advertising Representative
Rivendell Media, 212.242.6863

ONLINE AT

“Between The Lines Newspaper”
Follow us @YourBTL
Email your op-eds to editor@pridesource.com
Sign up online to receive our E-Digest

Our rate cards are available online. All material appearing in Between The Lines is protected by federal copyright law and may not be reproduced in whole or part without the permission of the publishers. Between The Lines is supported by many fine advertisers, but we cannot accept responsibility for claims made by our advertisers, nor can we accept responsibility for materials provided by advertisers or their agents.

Copyright 2016 Pride Source Media Group, LLC

www.PrideSource.com
Ferndale School Board of Education Passes LGBT Inclusive Policy

FERNDALE – The Ferndale Schools Board of Education passed a resolution in support of the state board LGBT youth guidelines that would allow transgender and gender non-conforming students to use the bathroom that aligns with their gender. The Ferndale Schools Board of Education took a vote April 18 on two resolutions in support of LGBT youth rights and unanimously agreed to support the state guidelines for LGBT youth.

“The Board of Education of Ferndale Public Schools fully supports the State Board of Education and the proposed guidelines designed to protect the safety and well-being of Michigan LGBTQ students,” Ferndale Schools Board of Education President Jennifer LaTosch told OaklandCounty115 before the vote. “Our own Strategic Plan is grounded in the values of trust, respect and inclusion which have guided us in working with and in support of our LGBTQ students and community members. The proposed state guidelines, likewise, provide a framework and guidance to all Michigan districts in creating and maintaining a safe, supportive and inclusive learning environment for all students. This is a vital step in protecting the physical and emotional safety of our LGBTQ students. We do not tolerate these discriminatory laws enacted by the states of North Carolina or Mississippi, nor will we support an organization or entity that seeks to bring harm to the transgender community. These Resolutions will reaffirm our commitment to support LGBTQ youth, our pledge to speak out against discrimination in all forms, and our appeal to Michigan legislators to disavow similar measures that attempt to harm and marginalize the LGBTQ community.”

The state board of education is accepting public comment on the Statement and Guidance on Safe and Supportive Learning Environments for LGBTQ Students. To submit a public comment, visit everyvoicecountsmi.org.
Letter to Anita
How yesterday’s discrimination shaped today’s LGBTQ older adults

Thursday, May 26, 2016
at the Michigan Theater

George Bedard and the Kingpins perform at 6:30 p.m.
Film starts at 7 p.m.

Remarks by
Dr. Ronni Sanlo and Jim Toy

Letter to Anita documents the effects of Anita Bryant’s 1970s anti-gay campaign on the life of former U-M Spectrum Center Director, Ronni Sanlo. This riveting film explores a painful time in history and its ongoing impact on many older adults today. It is a story of one woman’s strong voice and capacity to forgive.

VIP Reception & Movie $50
5:30 - 6:15 p.m.
Hors d’oeuvres provided by Atria Park of Ann Arbor.
Purchase tickets in advance.

General Admission $15
Doors open at 6:15 p.m.

Purchase in advance or at the door.
For ticket information visit www.med.umich.edu/geriatrics/BHS

A fundraiser benefiting
Ann Arbor Meals on Wheels
Housing Bureau for Seniors
Osher Lifelong Learning Institute
Silver Club Memory Programs
Turner Senior Wellness Program

Big Hearts for Seniors
2401 Plymouth Rd Suite C
Ann Arbor, MI 48105
734-998-9350
www.med.umich.edu/geriatrics/bhs
Rallies Over N. Carolina LGBT Law Begin as Lawmakers Return

BY GARY D. ROBERTSON AND JONATHAN DREW

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) – A day of rallies at North Carolina’s statehouse began Monday with the delivery of petitions signed by 180,000 people seeking the repeal of a law that curtails protections for LGBT people.

About 200 people gathered on the grounds of the old Capitol building to hear speakers denounce the law known as House Bill 2, or HB2. They then carried two-dozen cardboard boxes of signatures into the Capitol for delivery to Gov. Pat McCrory.

“HB2 ... is an act of violence,” Joaquin Carcano, a transgender man who’s suing over the law, told the crowd. “Our privacy and safety matter too.”

The head of the state NAACP, the Rev. William Barber, called the law “Hate Bill 2.” He said it affects the poor and minorities as well as the LGBT community, despite conservative efforts to depict it as a law focused on bathroom safety.

“We make a mistake when we call it the ‘bathroom bill,’” he said.

Protesters also plan a mass sit-in inside the Legislative Building later in the afternoon. North Carolina legislators are returning Monday night for their annual work session. Several House Democrats filed legislation earlier in the day to repeal the law, although Republican legislative leaders who approved it in a one-day special session last month have expressed no interest in overturning it. GOP lawmakers have focused their discussion of the law to provisions regarding transgender people to use multi-stall restrooms that align with their biological sex.

Democratic Rep. Grier Martin of Raleigh, a bill sponsor, said the law has stained the reputation of the state and harmed it economically. Some companies have halted planned expansions because of the law, while many groups have canceled their scheduled conventions in the state.

If the repeal were approved immediately, Martin told reporters, “it would not undo with the swipe of a pen the incredible damage that House Bill 2 has done to our economy. But it would stop the bleeding and put North Carolina back on the path of progress and moving forward.”

After the morning’s speakers at the rally, smaller groups of the law’s opponent broke off to discuss plans for civil disobedience, including what charges they may face and how the bail process would work.

Christian conservatives and other backers of the law scheduled a midday rally Monday on another nearby plaza.

White House Meets with Michigan LGBT Advocates

BY AJ TRAGER

DEARBORN – White House and federal officials met with LGBT advocates from across the state in an LGBT focused summit April 21 to discuss LGBT school policies, access to healthcare for trans Michiganders and access to capital for LGBT-owned small businesses.

The Obama administration has been committed to ensuring that the LGBT community is not only represented by hiring LGBT members to administration staff but also uplifted by passing and supporting legislation that directly affects the lives of LGBT Americans. Key members of the president’s administration were joined by Equality Michigan and LGBT organizations from across the state to discuss how federal programs are actively working to provide full equality for LGBT people.

“As local activists it’s not always obvious to us about what the federal government does and how it impacts our lives. So today I want you to get a chance to hear from folks directly, have deep conversations and come away with a real sense of what tools and opportunities are available on the federal level that can apply and fuel your work at the local level,” Executive Director of Equality Michigan Stephanie White said in her opening address to the gathering.

Michigan is experiencing a significant amount of activity around the rights of LGBT youth and trans members of society. There has been debate over the completely optional set of LGBT guidelines for LGBT youth in K-12 schools, and state Sen. Tom Casperson recently announced he will introduce a bill to ensure that trans men and women use the bathroom that is contrary to their gender identity.

Meet the Feds

Michigan isn’t the only state experiencing an onslaught of anti-LGBT legislation and the comments that follow. At the White House LGBT Summit, Obama administration officials highlighted the fact that services and programs that receive federal funding are required to follow the mandates and statutes of federal law.

“The accomplishments and progress made in the past 40 years were hard won. They required tremendous sacrifice and they did not happen without tears and uncertainty. I am mindful that there is still work required. We must continue to work together to create a more perfect union,” Raffi Freedman-Gurspan, LGBT liaison to the White House, said in her address presented at the summit.

Freedman-Gurspan was joined by Jaan Williams, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS); Ashlee Davis, U.S. Department of Agriculture; Nick Martin, U.S. Department of HHS; Jaan Williams, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS); Alejandro Aviles, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development; and Lolita Davis, U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. All six of these representatives were personally appointed by the president.

“From President Obama and from the administration, there is the belief that people are policy. When you put people into positions where they can make change, who they are and where they’re coming from matters,” Williams said.

Davis, an EEOC official, said that the commission was focused on addressing issues affecting LGBT communities. Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 states that no person shall be discriminated against based on their sex, but that is considered sex discrimination. Davis explained that the EEOC has worked with Affirmations, the ACLU and other organizations in the state to help LGBT Michigan residents file employment discrimination complaints, along with how to draft those charges.

HUD helps many of the most marginalized people, especially trans youth experiencing homelessness. Aviles explained how a 2012 change to allocating HUD funds ensured that homeless shelters receiving federal funds could not turn away or discriminate against those in need based on their sexual orientation or gender identity.

HHS is working to update section 1557 of the Affordable Care Act, which would provide further support and offer more expansive trans-related health care to those navigating the marketplace. The LGBT community is more likely than its heterosexual counterparts to be uninsured or underinsured. By working with national partners and folks on the ground, HHS is closer to supporting all communities in the healthcare system.

“Access to those communities and communities that experience higher rates of tobacco use, sexual violence and HIV/AIDS is our main priority,” Martin said.

A Q&A session was held after the panelists addressed the audience with specific changes and updates to LGBT policies within their departments. One commenter asked how quickly the work that has been done by the Obama administration can be undone by a new president.

“I cannot imagine how fast it would take to rework what we have accomplished in our own workforce for the LGBT people there. That has taken so much time that it is important to press forward,” Freedman-Gurspan said. “... We need the community to be engaged at the local and state level and remember how much has changed over our federal government.”

The summit featured a second panel discussing local issues and featured Sommer Foster and Leah Taraskiewicz from Equality Michigan; Pat Clark from Community AIDS Resource & Education Services; Jerry Peterson from the Ruth Ellis Center; Kathleen LaTosch from SAGE Detroit; and Danielle Woods from the Detroit Police Department. These local advocates highlighted the services currently being offered by Michigan organizations and what work is left to do in the state.

Small Business Administration

Deputy Associate Administrator for Field Operations for the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA), Eugene Cornelius, joined Jan Stevenson and Kevin Heard of the Detroit Regional LGBT Chamber of Commerce to talk about the importance of uniting and uplifting LGBT owned businesses.

Two-thirds of the jobs that have been created in the past five years were created by small businesses. Cornelius said that when he found out that there was a certification for LGBT owned businesses across the nation but only 135 companies had achieved certification, he moved immediately to change that. Over the last six to seven months, with the help of the SBA, nearly 850 businesses across the country are now certified as LGBT owned.

Heard, president of the Detroit Regional LGBT Chamber of Commerce, said that a benefit to working in an LGBT chamber of commerce is that the membership represents everybody. LGBT chambers consist of a collaboration of people from all identities that intersect with various communities from the disabled and veteran communities to Asian and black communities. LGBT chambers provide opportunities that no other chamber of commerce can deliver.

“The bottom line is that it’s important that you certify even if you’re not doing business with these administrations. I think our community is good at displaying our visibility. But we should be visible everyday, in every category, in every district, in every state, and we should be able to say in front of any senator or administration that here is our numbers, this is what we contribute to the national profit GDP,” Cornelius said. “Advocacy is a part of this.”

Three panel sessions were held following the keynote address presented by Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights, Catherine Lhamon: addressing safe school policies, safe school policy implementation and one focused on updates on trans health and coverage in the ACA. The latter half of the summit was not open to the press.

“By connecting movement leaders from nearly every LGBTQ organization in the state with White House and federal officials as well as key state officials, the summit provided a great catalyst that will propel our collective work forward,” Equality Michigan said in a statement following the conference.
What’s the Big Fuss About the Fourth Circuit Trans Decision?

BY LISA KEEN

It’s an important legal victory, but the federal appeals panel ruling last week in favor of a transgender teen has not yet knocked down the hostility or hurdles blocking transgender people to access public restrooms. And even though LGBT legal activists express a great deal of optimism that the case will eventually make gains for transgender people, opponents have already filed an appeal to the full federal appeals court.

The transgender court victory comes as national attention – even international attention – has reached an important juncture. North Carolina and Mississippi have passed laws to specifically bar transgender people from using public restrooms that correspond to their gender identity and presentation. That has triggered a flood of public and corporate protest, become an issue in the 2016 presidential campaign, and even prompted a question for President Obama and British Prime Minister David Cameron at a joint press conference in London last Friday.

The following is a quick primer on why the appeals panel decision has garnered so much attention and why it may reach far beyond one transgender student in Virginia:

What are the basics? A three-judge panel of the 4th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals voted 2 to 1 on April 19 that Title IX of the Education Amendments Act of 1972 – which prohibits discrimination based on sex by federally funded educational institutions – also prohibits discrimination based on gender identity. The majority’s ruling in Grimm v. Gloucester came on preliminary motion in a lawsuit filed by a transgender student, Gavin Grimm. The preliminary motion requested that he be able to use his public high school’s boys’ restrooms until his overall lawsuit can be resolved. An 87-year-old Reagan-appointed federal district court judge had denied the preliminary injunction, declaring Grimm to be a female and ruling that “sex” in Title IX does not include gender identity or sexual orientation.

The majority reversed that decision, noting that the U.S. Department of Education had issued an opinion letter last year, saying Title IX requires “a school generally must treat transgender students consistent with their gender identity.” The panel sent the case back to the district court with instructions to reconsider the preliminary injunction based on the panel majority’s decision. The Gloucester County School Board immediately appealed the panel’s decision to the full 4th Circuit.

Why is this a big deal? This lawsuit is still in the preliminary stages, and the decision addresses only sex discrimination prohibited by Title IX in federally funded educational facilities. But the April 19 ruling was the first time a federal appeals court anywhere in the nation has ruled that discrimination based on “sex” included discrimination based on “gender identity.” Next, the full 4th Circuit – which covers the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Maryland and West Virginia – will have an opportunity to weigh in or let the panel decision stand. But LGBT activists note that most of the rest of the 4th Circuit judges are fairly progressive and are likely to uphold the panel decision. Also, North Carolina Gov. Pat McCrory – who supported the law in that state to ban transgender people from using public restrooms consistent with their gender identity – said he would “respect” the 4th Circuit panel decision as it applies to federally funded educational facilities. An editor of the News & Observer newspaper in Raleigh said the ruling should prompt lawmakers there to repeal the anti-gay law.

How big could this get? This could go to the U.S. Supreme Court and a decision there could affect every state, not just the 4th Circuit states. But there’s another important potential impact, too: Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Title VII prohibits most public and private employers from discriminating based on “sex.” Like the U.S. Department of Education, the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has determined that the prohibition on “sex” discrimination includes a prohibition on “gender identity” and “sexual orientation” discrimination. As Jon Davidson, legal director for Lambda Legal, explains: “I believe there is at least as strong a case that courts are required to give the EEOC’s determinations that Title VII’s ban on sex discrimination prohibits discrimination based on gender identity and that excluding transgender employees from restrooms matching their gender identity violates Title VII (as) there was for the 4th Circuit to be obligated to defer to the similar determinations of the Department of Education.”

The Supreme Court, really? It’s possible, but LGBT legal activists think it’s not likely at this time. The Supreme Court rarely gets involved in a case at a preliminary stage. One of the big reasons it does take a case is to resolve a conflict among the various federal appeals circuits. Right now, only the 4th Circuit has ruled on Title IX, so there is no conflict, notes Jennifer Levi of Gay & Lesbian Advocates & Defenders. “So, even if the school eventually appealed to the Supreme Court, I would think it very unlikely that they would weigh in,” said Levi. Plus, she notes, there are only eight justices on the Supreme Court right now. A tie vote at the Supreme Court would leave the appeals decision intact, so it seems unlikely the Gloucester County School Board would appeal to the Supreme Court under these circumstances. More likely: If the full 4th Circuit upholds the panel decision, Shannon Minter of the National Center for Lesbian Rights predicts the school district will simply settle the lawsuit rather than go through the expense of a full trial when the 4th Circuit’s position is “so clear.”

Who’s the student who sued? His name is Gavin Grimm, and he’s a junior at Gloucester High School in the rural Virginia county of Gloucester. He’s 16 years old and has felt, since age 6, that he’s a male. A psychologist diagnosed Grimm with gender dysphoria, a condition in which a person strongly identifies as a gender different from his or her physical gender attributes. His parents helped him change his name, secure treatment to transition to a male identity, and inform and seek help from school officials. Grimm does not participate in physical education classes and did not seek use of the boys’ locker room, but he did seek use of the boys’ restroom. He explained that, in girls’ restrooms, girls reacted negatively to his presence because they perceive him to be a boy.

How did this land in court? School officials initially cooperated and allowed Grimm to use the boys’ restroom. Things went well for seven weeks then, according to court documents, some parents of other students complained, and school board officials held hearings. At those hearings, some parents expressed hostility toward Grimm, calling him a “young lady” and a “freak.” Some warned that allowing him to use the boys’ restroom would lead to sexual assaults and prompt boys to dress as girls in order to enter the girls’ restrooms. In response, the school board adopted a policy requiring that transgender students use “an alternative appropriate private facility.” But Grimm said that policy increased his feeling of being stigmatized.

Who was on the student’s side? The ACLU, Lambda Legal, the Transgender Law Center, the National Center for Lesbian Rights, Gay & Lesbian Advocates & Defenders, the Transgender Law & Policy Institute, the U.S. Justice Department, and school administrators in California, Florida, Illinois, Massachusetts and several other states, as well as the gay Whitman-Walker Health Clinic in Washington, DC; the Gay and Lesbian Medical Association; and the Gay, Lesbian & Straight Education Network.

Which judges participated? Judge Henry Floyd (an appointee of Presidents George W. Bush and Barack Obama) wrote the decision, which was joined by Senior Circuit Judge Andre Davis (an appointee of Presidents Bill Clinton and Barack Obama). Judge Paul Niemeyer (an appointee of Presidents Ronald Reagan and George H.W. Bush) concurred in part and dissented in part.
Trans Activist Files Sex Discrimination Lawsuit Against SVSU

BY AJ TRAGER

SAGINAW – “She said I was a liar and had been my entire life. That is hard. If I had to pick just one thing that really hurt...” Charin Davenport said trailing off. “That’s how you feel about yourself because you feel like your whole life is a lie. Nobody wants to be trans.”

By the time this conversation had happened, Charin Davenport, an adjunct English professor teaching at Saginaw Valley State University (SVSU) and Delta College, had been dismissed from her job at SVSU as assistant to the Director of Academic Programs Support, Ann Coburn-Collins.

Davenport had been working for SVSU in multiple capacities since 2007. She started as an adjunct professor in the English department, then from August 2011 to July 2012 she worked additionally as the coordinator of academic tutoring services and became Coburn-Collins’ assistant in July of 2012.

Before the 2012 fall semester began, Davenport attended a trans conference in Atlanta geared toward making campuses more open and affirming of trans students and faculty. She had gotten permission from Coburn-Collins and received funding for her trip south, which she had hoped would inform her academic work.

Davenport returned and spent the next semester teaching and working part time in an editorial capacity for Coburn-Collins. Shortly after the fall semester began, her scheduled hours were cut down to 10 a week.

In October 2012, Davenport decided it was time to introduce the world to her authentic self and began to retire the male identity that was assigned to her at birth. She scheduled an appointment with her supervisor, Coburn-Collins, to discuss changes moving forward and that’s when things went south.

“I told her that my intention was to start hormones and that I would probably be teaching as Char in the winter or the following fall – no later than the following fall. And then she started crying. I thought she was really happy,” Davenport told BTL.

Over the course of the next two months, Davenport’s position was knocked down to five hours a week and then was eliminated in December. Upon inquiry, Coburn-Collins told Davenport that the decision was made by the provost programs support office to see if her previous supervisor and work friend would be interested in catching up and repairing the bridge that was broken.

“I finally got the confidence and went to leave. She said, ‘Hold it right there, Mr. I froze and she said, ‘Don’t think that this is about your so called gender, this is about you being a liar.’ And I couldn’t speak and I walked out and I made a b-line to the secretary’s desk,” Davenport explained. “That’s when I knew that the reason I lost my job was because in the eyes of my boss I was disgusting, despicable and a liar because I’m transgender.”

Fighting Against Defeat, Davenport Files A Lawsuit

“I felt utterly defeated,” she said. Until that time, Davenport had never been fired from anything before. She had won awards for Teacher of the Year everywhere she had taught and was loved by her fellow faculty and her students. But she felt her life had been turned upside down.

Davenport went above and beyond to inform and educate the university chain of command regarding how changes in her appearance would affect the establishment. She met multiple times with the human resources department about her name change and her use of university locker rooms and bathrooms. Shortly after the heated meeting with her former boss, Davenport was diagnosed with kidney cancer. She had to stop teaching to undergo treatments but said she could’ve continued working editorially for the academic programs support office and maintained some form of income to help cover medical costs and other financial responsibilities. However, due to her termination, those funds were not available.

“You reach a point in your life and you think I’m gonna do this thing and you can’t. I just wanted to give up in all the ways that that means,” Char told BTL. “I sat in my apartment all by myself and cried.”

That’s when I knew that the reason I lost my job was because in the eyes of my boss I was disgusting, despicable and a liar because I’m transgender.

-Char Davenport

said that this was her own fault and that “she should’ve given me a full time job because I had too much time on my hands,” Davenport told BTL.

According to Davenport, Coburn-Collins called her a liar and the two engaged in a heated discussion. According to Davenport, Coburn-Collins threw papers and other office supplies off her desk and then began pounding on the desk.

“This was a federal lawsuit against SVSU for sex discrimination after losing a job because of her gender. She recently was highlighted in an Eclectablog.com series focusing on trans identities in the state. She has three children and two grandchildren. Photo by: Sam Jackson
Parting Glances

OPINION BY CHARLES ALEXANDER

Time Flies! That’s For Sure!

One of the pleasures for a writer or an artist is to come across an early composition or art piece and experience finding it with a sense of reading or seeing it for the first time. (Like coming across an old Polaroid picture. Oh, my God! Is that really me?) Such happened to me just the other day.

I was emailed an art piece image – “Rainbow Vibes” – I had done 20 years ago, favorably commented upon, I might add – and while tidying up my desk recently, I found copies of a lost, forgotten 1995 interview on Detroit gay bars, and a poem, “The Clock” I had written sometime in the 1950s.

And given a big May birthday that’s coming up, “The Clock” is certainly timely.

Shortly before retiring from the digitally enhanced combat called teaching, I originally came across my poem in a volume of DPS Reporter issues about students, teachers and education, circa the mid-1950s. I was indeed startled to discover it.

My poem dates from the ninth grade at Harry Burns Hutchins Intermediate School, to and from which I took a 10-cent bus ride for three reasonably happy years. The school was located on Woodrow Wilson and Blaine, in a then predominantly Jewish neighborhood. I still judge Hutchins as one of the best learning experiences of my long life.

“The Clock” was originally included in a student illustrated, hand-stapled, mimeograph booklet, “The Coach and Four.” (I began writing poetry during my summer at Baptist Camp. The poetic gift came along with an equally inspiring crush on my camp counselor, Jerry Somebodyorother.)

Though I wrote “The Clock” when I was 14 or 15, I’ll be the first to admit – modestly, of course – that there is about its rhyme-scheme brevity a touch of precocious, otherworldly, Emily Dickinsonian Americana genius. (Got that?)

Having provided such introductory palaver, here’s the poem in its pristine simplicity. (I’ll be delighted to read it in person for any festive occasion warranting the inclusion of a spiritually uplifting, LGBT inspired composition. Gratis.) And so ...

“Our dusty old clock sits on the shelf/ Ticking softly there by itself/ Slowly counting the hours away/ As night turns to another day./ Winter. Summer. The whole year through/ Tick tock. I hear it. Do you?/ We grow old and pass away/ But the clock goes on from day to day.”

Oh, well. I was only several months post-pubescent when I yielded to that premature calling of the muse. (Shared in passing: when I went to Burton Elementary School, part of our learning experience was poetry memorization. So, if asked – again gratis – I can recite William Wordsworth’s now very spring apropos, “The Daffodils.” “When oft

---

Viewpoint

Important National Victory for Transgender Students Rights

The 4th Circuit decision provides additional guidance to Michigan school districts regarding how to handle the issue of transgender students and bathrooms.

By Jay Kaplan

On April 19, 2016, the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals became the first United States federal court to hold that the U.S. Department of Education’s interpretation of Title IX (the federal civil rights law that prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex) and the issue of transgender students and restrooms must be followed by the federal courts. This means that public schools are required to permit transgender students to use restrooms consistent with their gender identity. This decision overturned a lower court ruling by federal district court Judge Robert Doumar, who had dismissed a claim by Gavin Grimm, a transgender male student attending high school in Gloucester, Virginia, that the school violated his Title IX rights by adopting a rule that he could use only restrooms designated for girls or unisex single-user restrooms.

The high school had accommodated Grimm when, at the beginning of his sophomore year, he informed school officials that he would be expressing his male gender identity, by permitting him to use the male restrooms. After several weeks without incident, some parents – alerted to the situation by their children – objected and pushed the school board to adopt a resolution limiting him to female facilities or unisex single user bathrooms.

The 4th Circuit Court of Appeals majority found the Department of Education’s interpretation of Title IX regarding the use of bathroom facilities is entitled to deference, unless a school board can demonstrate that the interpretation is “clearly erroneous or inconsistent with the regulation or statute.” The court majority found that the department’s interpretation that in the case of a transgender student using a sex-segregated restroom facility, “the individual’s sex as male or female is to be generally determined by reference to the student’s gender identity.”

This is a significant legal ruling on so many levels. First, as North Carolina and its notorious discriminatory trans bathroom law are within the 4th Circuit, the Court of Appeals has essentially said that North Carolina is in violation of Title IX – that could have an impact on whether the state will continue to receive federal education dollars if it enforces the law. There is already a federal lawsuit against the state of North Carolina and its bathroom law, brought by the National ACLU and Lambda, challenging both the constitutionality of this law, as well as its violation of Title IX. Second, what the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals has done is agree with both the U.S. Department of Education and the Department of Justice, that to deny transgender students the right to use bathrooms in accordance with their gender identity is illegal sex discrimination.

Third, this decision, although not binding on states outside of the 4th Circuit, sends a message to state legislatures contemplating passage legislation similar to North Carolina’s regarding transgender students and bathroom usage: “You will be violating Title IX and putting your federal education dollars at risk.”

Hopefully this message will be heard by members of the Michigan Legislature, where State Sen. Casperson has announced that he will be introducing legislation mandating that students can only use restrooms in accordance with the gender assigned on their birth certificates, or in the alternative single-user unisex sex restrooms. Clearly such legislation is both unconstitutional and constitutes sex discrimination and should it become law in Michigan, the ACLU will challenge in federal court.

This past week a similar bathroom bill in Mississippi was pulled as a result of a state attorney general opinion that the state could lose its federal education funding if such provision became law. And perhaps, most importantly, the 4th Circuit decision provides additional guidance to Michigan school districts regarding how to handle the issue of transgender students and bathrooms. It makes it clear that it is no longer acceptable to require the transgender student to use a separate restroom, which can be both isolating and stigmatizing. The ruling also demonstrates that the Michigan State Board of Education’s proposed guidance regarding the bathroom issue is both consistent with the what the federal government and federal courts are saying, as well as in compliance with federal civil rights laws.

Are you listening, lawmakers in Lansing? Jay Kaplan is the staff attorney with the ACLU of Michigan LGBT Project. He can be reached at jk Kaplan@aclumich.org.

Parting Glances

Continued from p. 10

upon my couch I lie…”

Come to think of it: as a kid I was Mr. Starlit Stairway, with an enthusiasm I find refreshing now looking back, but also now curious, given my penchant for being shy in public places in these my advancing years. (Since when, Mary?)

At Hutchins I also did a ventriloquist act, with a dummy named Hermann purchased at Hall’s Magic Shop, long vanished from Downtown Detroit. I haven’t a clue what my script was. I think it had something to do with the terrors of jaywalking, but apparently I got enthusiastic applause for my schizoid efforts. (And an A in Auditorium.)

That same year I put on a magic show at the Cass Avenue Methodist Church. As a proud owner of a multipurpose Gilbert’s Magic Set (linking rings, deck of prepared cards, trick magic wands, vanishing handkerchiefs, fake mustache), I felt myself Harry Houdini incarnate. Handcuffs and straight jackets came much later.

My assistant was Carolyn Clark, whose father George Murray claimed to have worked with famed magician Harry Blackstone, one of magickdom’s greats. But Carolyn and I had a grand time. The applause and free dinner made stars of us, if only for an hour’s indulgence.

As I approach my 80th birthday in two weeks, I smile at the refreshing, unsullied innocence of the likable kid I think I was. Life had a “Wow! Pow!” quality about it. Get out on stage! Take charge! Pull rabbits out of hats! Change silken handkerchiefs . . . purple, blue, green, red, yellow, orange . . . Take bows. Tear mustaches. Hocus locus! Oh, yes! I’m busy on a new birthday poem. (As soon as I can figure out what rhymes with Shinola.) Tempus fugit.

Charles@pridesource.com

Creep of the Week

Louie Gohmert

“target” anywhere in America and chances are people will think, “I need to buy some underwear, milk and a laundry basket” before they think “shooting range.”

But now Target is the target of the anti-trans right because Target did something pretty radical. Something few companies have dared to do because it’s just so fringe, so wild, so unheard of. And no, it has nothing to do with Isaac Mizrahi. This time.

On April 19, Target announced that it’s okay for people to use the restrooms at their store. I know! Can you even believe it? Can you even believe how totally mundane and uninteresting that should be? But, no. This nation’s unhealthy obsession with the potty habits of trans people or people who do not have a rigid gender identity has made such a statement revolutionary, apparently.

“(W)e welcome transgender team members and guests to use the restroom or fitting room facility that corresponds with their gender identity,” Target said in an April 19 statement. “Given the specific questions these legislative proposals raise about how we manage our fitting rooms and restrooms, we felt it was important to state our position.”

To which I say, “Bravo, Target! Now if you would just let your workers unionize I might love you instead of just liking you.”

Other people, however, are FREAKING. Dumb people, but people nonetheless.

And one of those dumb is Rep. Louie Gohmert, R-Texas.

“I understand Target may now be changing their restrooms,” Gohmert said on the House floor on April 21 according to the Huffington Post. “If they’re going to be having women come into men’s restrooms, I won’t be going to Target to shop, unless and until that changes.”

The crux of Gohmert’s complaint, and really the entire argument in favor of the bathroom police laws being proposed across the country, is who gets to define what a man or a woman is? Target thinks it should be up to the individual person. Gohmert thinks it should be him.

First of all, ha ha. Get it? LGBTQRST… Because there are so many weird letters! And who cares what they mean?

Secondly, it has not already been shown that guys will fake being trans so they can get nude videos. That is not a thing. There are guys who are predators. And those guys are predators regardless of whether the law discriminates against trans people or not. To say that trans men and women are by definition sexual predators simply because they make you feel confused and uncomfortable is stupid and hateful.

The crux of Gohmert’s complaint, and really the entire argument in favor of the bathroom police laws being proposed across the country, is who gets to define what a man or a woman is? Target thinks it should be up to the individual person. Gohmert thinks it should be him.

Gohmert is totally going to delete his Cartwheel app as soon as he can find it on his flip phone.
thinking about cancer, always being broke, losing another job and never having self-actualization and congruency of everything... never knowing.”

She and her former boss were close. Davenport would house-sit while Coburn-Collins was out of town and they would go out for drinks and socialize together after work with other university faculty. Coburn-Collins was the second person Davenport told about her plans of transitioning, thinking that Coburn-Collins would be supportive and happy for her and share in the joy.

On April 8, 2016, Jennifer Salvatore filed a lawsuit in federal court against SVSU on behalf of Davenport claiming that the university discriminated against Davenport due to her gender.

“Discrimination against people who don’t conform to traditional gender stereotypes is a form of sex discrimination under the law,” Salvatore said in a news release. “No human being should be vilified and denigrated the way Char was by her supervisor, let alone lose their job because of who they are. She is a wonderful person with a lot of courage to speak out about what happened to her.”

The lawsuit claims that SVSU violated Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and the Equal Protection Clause of the U.S. Constitution. Davenport and her counsel are asking the court to reinstate her to her former position and is seeking financial damages from a jury.

“We support all our students, faculty and staff, including those who are members of the LGBT community,” J.J. Boehm, SVSU spokesman, said. “We have a Pride Center on campus to serve those individuals and to contribute toward an inclusive campus environment. Since this is pending litigation, we can have no further comment at this time.”

“I needed to do this for me, because you begin to believe the narrative about yourself. There’s a whole world out there waiting to beat me up – us (trans men and women) up – you know? I don’t have a persecution complex. There’s a whole world out there that will put up road blocks and knock us down, and I decided I wasn’t going to allow that. I guess, in a way, I’m glad that it was someone like me,” Davenport said.

Davenport is a board member for Transgender Michigan and is a well respected trans activist in the state. She recently was highlighted in an Eclectablog.com series focusing on trans identities in the state. She has three children and two grandchildren.

Coburn-Collins was approached for comment; as of press time, BTL had not received a response.

---

Recap: New York Primary

BY LISA KEEN

Ted Cruz suffered the consequences of deriding “New York values,” John Kasich won a little support while speaking out against anti-gay laws, and Donald Trump raked in nearly all the chips from the April 19 New York primary by keeping a mostly muddled middle ground on rights for LGBT people.

In the Democratic primary, where both candidates have long-standing records of respecting LGBT people, Hillary Clinton held nearly all the backing from LGBT leaders. She, too, beat her opponent, Sen. Bernie Sanders.

With big wins in the New York primary, Clinton and Trump have significantly tightened their grip on their parties’ presidential nominations. Former Secretary of State Clinton now has 80 percent of the 2,383 delegates she needs to secure the Democratic presidential nomination; U.S. Sen. Sanders has 52 percent.

Real estate titan Trump has 68 percent of the 1,237 delegates he needs to win the Republican nomination; U.S. Sen. Cruz has 45 percent; Ohio Gov. Kasich has 12 percent.

Clinton boasted the endorsement of most well-known LGBT leaders in the state, including State Sen. Brad Hoylman; New York State Assembly members Deborah Glick, Daniel O’Donnell, Harry Bronson, and Matthew Titone; and former New York City mayoral candidate Christine Quinn. She was also endorsed by openly LGBT New York City Councilmembers Daniel Dromm, Corey Johnson, Rosie Mendez, Jimmy Van Bramer, and James Vacca. And she also won the endorsement of the Stonewall Democratic Club of NYC.

A New York Times map of how various New York City neighborhoods voted showed Clinton taking 68 percent of the vote in heavily gay Chelsea, compared to Sanders’ 32 percent. She got 66 percent, versus Sanders’ 34 percent, in the West Village and SoHo. Even an untidy, self-selected survey of men in New York using a gay dating app found that most were supporting Clinton. The “data” collected by Scruff showed that, of 765 men who responded, 57 percent said they would vote for Clinton, 32 percent for Sanders, 4 percent “undecided” but voting for a Democrat, and 4 percent for Trump. Almost 2 percent said they would vote for Kasich. Less than 1 percent (three people) backed Cruz.

At an LGBT fundraiser in New York City March 30, openly gay actors Guillermo Diaz and Cynthia Nixon were on hand to welcome the candidate.

Former State Sen. Tom Duane endorsed Sanders.

---

People like that

What made the run-up to the New York primary particularly interesting was all the talk about gay issues on the Republican side.

In a town hall forum with CNN’s Anderson Cooper April 13, Cruz tried to redefine what he criticized in January as “New York values.”

Many groups had taken offense at Cruz’s use of the term, including LGBT people who read it as code for acceptance of LGBT people and their equality under the law.

But Cruz told Cooper he was only repeating the phrase Trump had used in 1999 in regards to partial birth abortion. Cruz said he used the term to describe “liberal Democrats who have been, frankly, hurting the people of New York over and over again.”

He then shifted his defense of the term onto a Hispanic African-American pastor and state senator, Ruben Diaz. He paraphrased Diaz as telling him in Spanish that he understood what Cruz was trying to say.

“He said, ‘I know exactly what you mean by New York values because,’ he said, ‘I’m a Democrat... and my Democratic governor, Andrew Cuomo, said if you are pro-life, if you believe in traditional marriage, if you believe in the Second Amendment, you have no place in the state of New York.’”

Ultra-conservative commentator Glenn Beck tried to soften Cruz’s harsh edges, too. He quoted Cruz as saying he “chewed my staff out” for booking the candidate on the same stage with virulently anti-gay speaker Kevin Swanson early in the contest. Swanson told the audience that gays should be executed.

Beck said he and his daughter were meeting with Cruz when his daughter asked Cruz why he appeared on the same stage as such a man. Beck said Cruz told his daughter that he considered that speaker “reprehensible,” “bigoted” and “despicable.” “I want nothing to do with him or any kind of alliances to people like that,” Beck said Cruz told him and his daughter.

Two days before the primary, appearing on ABC’s “Good Morning America,” Cruz tackled a question from a man in the television audience who said he was leaning toward voting for Trump. The man, Todd Calonge, identified himself as being married to his husband for two years.

Calonge said he noticed “religious freedom laws” and “institutionalized discrimination” laws around the country.

“What would you do as president to protect me and my husband from institutionalized discrimination?”

“When it comes to religious liberty,” said Cruz, “religious liberty is something that protects everyone. …All of us, we want to live in a world where we don’t have the government dictating our beliefs, dictating how we live. We have a right to live according to our conscience, and that freedom ultimately protects each and every one of us. And we shouldn’t have the right to force others to knuckle under and give up their faith and give up their belief. And for me, I have spent my entire adult life fighting to defend religious liberty, fighting to defend the right of every one of us to seek out and worship God. And I think keeping government out of the way of your lives protects the freedom of every one of us.”

There was a scattering of applause but show co-host Robin Roberts, who is openly gay, jumped in.

“But when you talk about freedom,” she said, reminding Cruz that Calongne has a husband, “a lot of people would say, ‘Doesn’t everybody have the freedom to be treated equally?’”

“Of course we do,” said Cruz, “and the First Amendment protects everyone equally.” He then leapt into a discussion of kosher delis.

This time, co-host George Stephanopoulos entered the fray. He noted that Cruz supports efforts to repeal the U.S. Supreme Court’s ruling against state bans on marriage for same-sex couples.

“What would that mean for couples like Todd and his husband who already are married?” he asked.

“Well, look, I’m a constitutionalist,” said Cruz, “and under the constitution, marriage is a question for the states. ...So if somebody wants to change the marriage laws, I don’t think five unelected lawyers down in Washington dictating that. ...If you want to change the marriage laws, convince your fellow citizens to change the laws.”

On the other end of the Republican candidates’ political spectrum, at least as far as it concerns LGBT people, Kasich was continuing his double mantra of, “I’m for traditional marriage” and “I want no discrimination against anybody.”

At town meeting campaign event April 11, carried by ABC News, an audience member asked Kasich, “As president of the United States, what would you do to protect our lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender youth?”

Kasich acknowledged “what’s happening in North Carolina, what happened in Indiana, Georgia, and Mississippi – states that have passed laws to allow discrimination against LGBT people.

“In my state, first of all, I want no discrimination against anybody. I’m not in favor of discrimination, period, end of story,” said Kasich.

“Secondly, the Supreme Court ruled, you know, in favor of gay marriage. I’m a traditional marriage guy. But the court ruled. I’m allowing a court ruling to stand. I’m not looking for some constitutional amendment. It’s done.”

“Now, our religious institution should be protected. They should be able to do the things they want,” continued Kasich. The town hall audience interrupted with applause, but Kasich quieted them to add the rest of his thought – concerning discrimination by commercial entities.

“Let’s say I’m running a cupcake store. Somebody comes in, they want to buy a cupcake,” said Kasich. “Sell them a cupcake! OK?”

“Secondly, though, if I’m a photographer and you want me to go to your wedding and I don’t want to, you know, then, go find another photographer, okay?”

Kasich said he thought “things were going along quite well after the Supreme Court decision” against state bans on marriage for same-sex couples but that some people “were using... this to some degree as a wedge issue.”

“Now, if in my state, I find that we have a problem – I mean a real problem; not a case here and a case there, but a real problem where things are coming apart – of course, we have to do something about that,” said Kasich. He did not suggest what kind of “something” he might consider but he suggested he would be inclined to, “Number one, to respect the position of those in the gay community, and secondly, to try to figure out what you do about religious liberty.”

“But I have to tell you,” concluded Kasich, “when you get in the middle of that, there’s no easy answer. So you know what I kind of think? Let it go. ...Respect people – that they are different than we are because that’s just the way it is. And to get into these businesses of, ‘I’m not gonna serve you because you’re a certain (audio not clear), c’mon folks. We have to live together ... How about a little bit more tolerance, a little bit more respect.”
Jane Lynch Talks Life After ‘Glee,’ Catholic Guilt & Crushing on Susan Sarandon

BY CHRIS AZZOPARDI

You better believe Jane Lynch can sing, and even if you don’t, “I think by the time you buy the ticket and come to the show, you hope I can sing! You’ve got your fingers crossed!” the “Glee” alum says of her touring act “See Jane Sing,” cracking her signature booming laugh.

Lynch is best known as iconic cheer coach Sue Sylvester, who tormented McKinley High for six seasons of Fox’s musical-dramedy behemoth “Glee,” which brimmed with all sorts of songs – just not many sung by Lynch herself. There was, of course, the playful homage to Madonna, when Lynch donned black lace for a frame-by-frame remake of the Queen’s video “Vogue.” But on “Glee,” the 55-year-old Emmy winner was better known for her tyrannical outbursts and hair taunts (poor Mr. Schuester) than she was for breaking into song.

Now, Lynch is making up for lost time as she headlines “See Jane Sing,” the entertainer’s touring cabaret that merges comedy with music and also features Kate Flannery of “The Office” and Tim Davis, the music director of “Glee.” The show stops in Michigan for the Ann Arbor Summer Festival at 8 p.m. June 29.

After resolving a shoddy phone connection (“Where are you? Iraq covering the war?”), Lynch spoke at length about how her cabaret is not a “live sex show” like Liza’s, the one man she’d go straight for (and the one woman she’d stay gay for), and what’s so funny about three white people performing Nicki Minaj’s “Anaconda.”

Do you read reviews?

Umm, good question! I have for this show, yes. The reason being is because I’m confident (laughs). I don’t think anybody could say anything about it, me or anybody in it that would actually stick. I don’t think they could say anything bad because I’m very confident in it; it’s such a blast that it stands alone as an experience for me without anybody telling me it’s good or bad.
The reason I ask is because I read a New York Times review from 2014. It was awesome, wasn’t it?

It was! They noted the show’s “sexual subtext.” I haven’t seen the show yet, but I’m curious about this “sexual subtext.”

Yeah, I am too! I’m curious about it too! (Laughs) I think what they might have been talking about is: Cheyenne Jackson, a wonderfully talented man who also happens to be gay, did “Something Stupid” that night with me. It was a special thing and he came up and we sang the song “Something Stupid,” and he talked about this weird kind of sexual tension between the two of us, because I think he’s so attractive and so handsome and I get very confused about my sexuality when I’m in the presence of Cheyenne Jackson.

When I’m watching Cheyenne Jackson I know that I am 100 percent homosexual, no question about it.

Isn’t that wonderful? I feel that way about Susan Sarandon, though she probably wouldn’t, you know, receive my affection… well, she’d receive it, but she might not return it.

What was your introduction to cabaret?

Well, let’s see, I’ve been in theater for a long time. I go see people perform, whether it’s at a hole in the wall or it’s a chick with a guitar. I usually don’t like big rock concerts – I don’t seek those out – so the combination of doing a comedy show with music has always been something I loved. I used to do sketch comedy a lot before I started doing television and film, and we always found a way to put a song in there. I did a “one person” show and I put the quotes there because there were three other people in there; it was all my material, but I had other people in it and we had six or seven songs in it and I love that. I never set out to do that. I love mining things for the comedy and, of course, that attracts people who love doing that as well. I had this one hilarious friend in high school, Christopher, who’s still a friend, and we did nothing but laugh together. The silliness of the social hierarchies – we would watch those and we laughed about those. We laughed about everything; nothing was too sacred. And we were Catholic kids too! We laughed about the priests and the congregation. So, if you’re allowing your passion to lead you, you end up making money at it, which is a great thing! (Laughs) But I didn’t set out to do it. I really just set out to laugh.

For a while there, you were performing in church basements.

Yeah – a lot of them! The churches would rent out their basement just to make some money and they didn’t care what kind of show you were doing. They didn’t show up; you just paid the 50 bucks and you set up the lights and that’s what ya did.

Is it true that, when you ended up at Second City, you were one of only two women picked to join the troupe?

Well, that wasn’t unique. There were only two women in every company. Now, it’s three. So it wasn’t a unique thing. Every company had two women and four guys and now it’s three and three. It wasn’t like I was only one of two women in the entire history of Second City. I know in some press release it says that, or something online says “she was chosen,” but no, it’s not a big deal. All the girls were one of two women. Now they’re one of three women.

Did humor help you survive, then, as a kid?

Oh yeah, absolutely.

How did you know you were funny and when did you realize you could make a living being funny?

I never set out to do that. I love mining things for the comedy and, of course, that attracts people who love doing that as well. I had this one hilarious friend in high school, Christopher, who’s still a friend, and we did nothing but laugh together. The silliness of the social hierarchies – we would watch those and we laughed about those. We laughed about everything; nothing was too sacred. And we were Catholic kids too! We laughed about the priests and the congregation. So, if you’re allowing your passion to lead you, you end up making money at it, which is a great thing! (Laughs) But I didn’t set out to do it. I really just set out to laugh.

For a while there, you were performing in church basements.

Yeah – a lot of them! The churches would rent out their basement just to make some money and they didn’t care what kind of show you were doing. They didn’t show up; you just paid the 50 bucks and you set up the lights and that’s what ya did.

Is it true that, when you ended up at Second City, you were one of only two women picked to join the troupe?

Well, that wasn’t unique. There were only two women in every company. Now, it’s three. So it wasn’t a unique thing. Every company had two women and four guys and now it’s three and three. It wasn’t like I was only one of two women in the entire history of Second City. I know in some press release it says that, or something online says “she was chosen,” but no, it’s not a big deal. All the girls were one of two women. Now they’re one of three women.

Did humor help you survive, then, as a kid?

Oh yeah, absolutely.

How did you know you were funny and when did you realize you could make a living being funny?

I never set out to do that. I love mining things for the comedy and, of course, that attracts people who love doing that as well. I had this one hilarious friend in high school, Christopher, who’s still a friend, and we did nothing but laugh together. The silliness of the social hierarchies – we would watch those and we laughed about those. We laughed about everything; nothing was too sacred. And we were Catholic kids too! We laughed about the priests and the congregation. So, if you’re allowing your passion to lead you, you end up making money at it, which is a great thing! (Laughs) But I didn’t set out to do it. I really just set out to laugh.

For a while there, you were performing in church basements.

Yeah – a lot of them! The churches would rent out their basement just to make some money and they didn’t care what kind of show you were doing. They didn’t show up; you just paid the 50 bucks and you set up the lights and that’s what ya did.

Is it true that, when you ended up at Second City, you were one of only two women picked to join the troupe?

Well, that wasn’t unique. There were only two women in every company. Now, it’s three. So it wasn’t a unique thing. Every company had two women and four guys and now it’s three and three. It wasn’t like I was only one of two women in the entire history of Second City. I know in some press release it says that, or something online says “she was chosen,” but no, it’s not a big deal. All the girls were one of two women. Now they’re one of three women.

Did humor help you survive, then, as a kid?

Oh yeah, absolutely.

How did you know you were funny and when did you realize you could make a living being funny?

I never set out to do that. I love mining things for the comedy and, of course, that attracts people who love doing that as well. I had this one hilarious friend in high school, Christopher, who’s still a friend, and we did nothing but laugh together. The silliness of the social hierarchies – we would watch those and we laughed about those. We laughed about everything; nothing was too sacred. And we were Catholic kids too! We laughed about the priests and the congregation. So, if you’re allowing your passion to lead you, you end up making money at it, which is a great thing! (Laughs) But I didn’t set out to do it. I really just set out to laugh.

For a while there, you were performing in church basements.

Yeah – a lot of them! The churches would rent out their basement just to make some money and they didn’t care what kind of show you were doing. They didn’t show up; you just paid the 50 bucks and you set up the lights and that’s what ya did.

Is it true that, when you ended up at Second City, you were one of only two women picked to join the troupe?

Well, that wasn’t unique. There were only two women in every company. Now, it’s three. So it wasn’t a unique thing. Every company had two women and four guys and now it’s three and three. It wasn’t like I was only one of two women in the entire history of Second City. I know in some press release it says that, or something online says “she was chosen,” but no, it’s not a big deal. All the girls were one of two women. Now they’re one of three women.

Did humor help you survive, then, as a kid?

Oh yeah, absolutely.

How did you know you were funny and when did you realize you could make a living being funny?

I never set out to do that. I love mining things for the comedy and, of course, that attracts people who love doing that as well. I had this one hilarious friend in high school, Christopher, who’s still a friend, and we did nothing but laugh together. The silliness of the social hierarchies – we would watch those and we laughed about those. We laughed about everything; nothing was too sacred. And we were Catholic kids too! We laughed about the priests and the congregation. So, if you’re allowing your passion to lead you, you end up making money at it, which is a great thing! (Laughs) But I didn’t set out to do it. I really just set out to laugh.

For a while there, you were performing in church basements.

Yeah – a lot of them! The churches would rent out their basement just to make some money and they didn’t care what kind of show you were doing. They didn’t show up; you just paid the 50 bucks and you set up the lights and that’s what ya did.

Is it true that, when you ended up at Second City, you were one of only two women picked to join the troupe?

Well, that wasn’t unique. There were only two women in every company. Now, it’s three. So it wasn’t a unique thing. Every company had two women and four guys and now it’s three and three. It wasn’t like I was only one of two women in the entire history of Second City. I know in some press release it says that, or something online says “she was chosen,” but no, it’s not a big deal. All the girls were one of two women. Now they’re one of three women.
Ann Arbor Film Festival Ends with Awards, Including Best LGBT Film

BY BTL STAFF

The 54th Annual Ann Arbor Film Festival has officially come to a close. Over 65 filmmakers were in attendance from eight countries. Interns flew in from Edge Hill University in the United Kingdom and attendees traveled from near and far, all to experience the world of experiential film. Virtual reality, digital animation and more filled the lobby and discussion of film, art and life radiated through the Michigan Theater for six days straight.

Jurors Garbiñe Ortega, Carl Bogner and Rebecca Baron chose award recipients, including “Hard as Opal” by Jared Buckhiester and Dani Leventhal for the auteur Film Award for Best LGBT Film. In “Hard as Opal” the lines between truth and fiction, fact and fantasy, are reined in and treated not as fixed, divisive markers but as malleable threads of narrative potential. Buckhiester and Leventhal perform alongside other non-actors who are filmed in their own varying domestic and professional environments. The result is a rich accumulation of narratives held together by questions concerning the nature of objectification, loneliness and dissociative fantasy.

Other award categories included:

Ken Burns Award for Best of the Festival
“Ear, Nose, Throat” (Kevin Jerome Everson)

The Stan Brakhage Film at Wit’s End Award
“The Illinois Parables” (Deborah Stratman)

Lawrence Kasdan Award for Best Narrative Film
“Edmond” (Nina Gantz)

Michael Moore Award for Best Documentary Film
“The Event” (Sergei Loznitza)

Tios Award for Best International Film
“Dead Slow Ahead” (Mauro Herce)

Peter Wilde Award for Most Technically Innovative Film
“(conical signal)” - arc

“Bending to Earth” (Rosa Barba)

Leon Speakers Award for Best Sound Design
“Irradiant Field” (Laura Kraning)

The No Violence Award
“Baba Dana Talks To The Wolves” (Ralitsa Doncheva)

The Eileen Maitland Award
“Vague Images at the Beginning and End of the Day” (Carl Elsaesser)

Prix DeVarti for Funniest Film
“A Boy Needs a Friend” (Steve Reinke)

George Manupelli Founder’s Spirit Award
“We Chose the Milky Way” (Eva Marie Rodbro)

Gil Omenn Art & Science Award
“Prima Materia” (Charlotte Pryce)

The Eileen Maitland Award
“Baba Dana Talks To The Wolves” (Ralitsa Doncheva)

Tom Berman Award for Most Promising Filmmaker
“Jääji Approx.” (Sky Hopinka)

Kodak Cinematic Vision Award
“Australian Paper” (Minjung Kim)

The Stan Brakhage Film at Wit’s End Award
“The Event” (Sergei Loznitza)

PROCAM Best Regional Filmmaker Award
“Our Last Hurrah” (Terri Sarris)

Overture/Wazoo Award for Best Music Video
“Beasts in the Garden” by Spires that in the Sunset Rise (Lori Felker)

PROCAM Best Regional Filmmaker Award
“Our Last Hurrah” (Terri Sarris)

“How to Rust” (Julia Yezbick)

Jury Awards went to “Two Clothespins in an Envelope” (Susanna Wallin); “Living Para Vivir / Live to Live” (Laidia Lertxundi); “Blue and Red” (Zhou Tao); “How to Rust” (Julia Yezbick) and “Summer 1975” (Wrik Mead).

Visit www.aaifilmfest.org for more information and to stay tuned for next year’s festival.

How are you going to say...

I Love You?
Pinpoint your ad dollars where they will do the most good...
Advertise in the next Cool Cities
TO PLACE AN AD CALL 734.293.7200

Ann Arbor Advertisers

Abracadabra Jewelry & Gem Gallery .......................... 1
Anderson, PLLC, Mary K. .................................................. 2
Ann Arbor Animal Hospital ........................................ 12
Ann Arbor Civic Theatre ............................................. 3
Ann Arbor Saline Family Chiro ....................................... 4
Ann Arbor Symphony Orchestra .................................. 4
The Ark ................................................................. 5

* Not shown on map

D’orio, Jd, Ptc, Lynn B. ........................................... 7
Downtown Home & Garden .......................................... 8
Esquire Interiors ......................................................... 9
First Unitarian Church of Ann Arbor ......................... 10
Frick, LMSW, BCD, CBT, Julie .................................. 11
Greene, LMSW, ACSW, Marge .................................. 12
Gail van Lanen Ph.d. .................................................. 13
Greene, LMSW, ACSW, Marge .................................. 14
Gail van Lanen Ph.d. .................................................. 15
Gail van Lanen Ph.d. .................................................. 16

* Not shown on map

Hillers ........................................................................ 17
HIV/AIDS Resource Center (Harc) ............................... 18
Hummle Society of Huron Valley................................. 19
Iglesia Martell Law ...................................................... 20
Jim Toy Resource Center .............................................. 21

* Not shown on map

Lewis Jewelers .............................................................. 22
Lord of Light Lutheran Church ...................................... 23
Men’s Yoga .................................................................. 24
Merkel Carpet One ....................................................... 25
Mitchell Gold & Bob Williams ....................................... 26
Necto ............................................................................. 27
Orion Automotive Services Inc .................................... 28
People’s Food Coop ..................................................... 29
Performance Network .................................................. 30
Peterson, PLLC, Lisa J. ............................................... 31
PFLAG Ann Arbor ........................................................ 32
Polo Fields Golf ........................................................... 33
Rock Shoppe ............................................................... 34
Rosenberg, David ......................................................... 35
Shielft, Cabaret and Gallery ......................................... 36
Spectrum Center .......................................................... 37
Three Chairs Co .......................................................... 38
Tito Mexican Cafe ......................................................... 39
Top of the Lamp .......................................................... 40
Trillium Real Estate ...................................................... 41
Two Men And A Truck .................................................. 42
UMHS Comprehensive Gender Services Program ........ 43
University Musical Society .......................................... 44

* Not shown on map

We are committed to providing the highest quality precision service.

5133 Carpenter Road, Suite A
Ypsilanti, MI 48197
Phone (734) 528-9581
Fax (734) 528-9593
www.dependablellc.com

We work with all insurance companies!

LISA J. PETERSON, P.L.L.C.
Attorney and Mediator

• family law
• estate planning
• business & tax planning
• criminal matters
• mediation services

Tel: (734) 474-2334
lpeterlaw@gmail.com
401 N. Main Street, Ann Arbor, 48104
www.lisajpeterlaw.com

FREE loaners on any job
(subject to terms and conditions)

ABRACADABRA Jewelry/Gem Gallery

VIEW THE EXCLUSIVE COLLECTION AT ABRA’S ALEX SEPKUS TRUNK SHOW
FRIDAY, MAY 6TH | 11AM-8PM
SATURDAY, MAY 7TH | 11AM-5PM

734.994.4848
WWW.ABRAGEM.COM

www.PrideSource.com  Facebook  Twitter  Instagram  April 28, 2016  BTL
Assuming you’re taking a bus on tour, what kind of music do you listen to on the road?

Oh no, we’re not on a bus, man. Dude, we are flying. We do this first class – that’s why I’m not making any money on this tour! We fly. I said, “I’m not gonna do it if I have to sit in a bus,” so we fly and we all fly together, although Kate and I do fly first class and I make a joke about it in the show – another reason why I’m not making any money on this tour. But we all fly together and we hang out. We all eat together, laugh together, so I’m not listening to music or anything. I’m not a listener to music – I don’t listen to it very much. But Kate does, and Kate and I have very much the same taste. So, when we’re getting ready – we have a dressing room together – she plays Burt Bacharach songs. She has a terrific library of Burt Bacharach songs, not just by Burt Bacharach, but by all sorts of groups like The Carpenters and we sing at the top of our lungs and that’s our little pre-show warmup.

How did Nicki Minaj’s “Anaconda” end up on the setlist?

I had a burst of inspiration! I thought, “Wouldn’t it be funny if we did this?” First of all, I think it’s one of the most amazing, hilarious and artful videos I have ever seen. It is so funny. She is sooo self-deprecating, and she’s so kind of pinned this character – this rich girl who’s from the hood who has no class who all of a sudden is hanging out with drug dealers and having access to Balmain and nice clothes and a nice car. She just nails it. So, I thought, “Wouldn’t it be fucking hilarious if me, Kate and Tim” – I mean we look like the Heritage Singers out there! We’re so white, so immaculately white, and all three of us cannot dance at all but have all the confidence in the world in our moves.

Looking back on “Glee”: The show changed a lot of queer kids’ lives, and if I had been younger, it really would’ve influenced me in a major way. Right; me too!

If a show like “Glee” had been on when you were a young gay person, how might your life have been different?

Ahh, it would’ve showed me that I wasn’t alone, and oh, just to know that you’re not alone. I really thought I had a mental disease that I was never gonna be able to get over, that I was cursed with it, that it was my fault.

Catholic guilt?

Yes, yeah! And I don’t know where I got this, because my parents weren’t Catholic in that way. We went to church but they weren’t like, “This is bad; this is good.” They just weren’t that way. They were very relaxed, not very good Catholics except that they went to church every Sunday. In saying that they weren’t very good Catholics – they were really good people! (laughs)

I get it. They weren’t devout.

Exactly. So, I don’t know where I got that it was so horrible, maybe just by the fact that it was whispered about, if it was spoken about at all. And I didn’t see one person in my trajectory of life that had it! (laughs) I was completely alone in it, so for me to have a “Glee,” and I’m sure I speak perhaps for you and a lot of other gay people growing up in the ’70s and the ’80s, a “Glee” would’ve been so wonderful – oh, how great that would’ve been.

Did you feel that, when “Glee” ended in 2015, it was time?

Yeah, sure. Absolutely. You know, these things can’t go on forever. We have this thing in American television that you have to be on for 10 years or something, and I think the British have it right. The British do 13 episodes and then take a holiday.

Does the cast keep in touch? Are you and Matthew Morrison still close?

I do talk to Matthew, yeah. And my niece was assistant to one of our executive producers and she’s friends with all those folks, so I see them and they come over to my house and we make dinner and sit out on the porch.

I was gonna say, “What’s a post-’Glee’ party at Jane’s house like?” (laughs) Well, they don’t talk about “Glee,” that’s for sure! They’ve all kind of moved on, but they’re very good friends. It was a bonding experience for them – for all of them.

You have “Mascots” coming up for Netflix, and it’s directed by Christopher Guest, who also did “Best in Show” with you. What was it like teaming with Jennifer Coolidge again after playing her butch lesbian personal dog handler in “Best in Show”?

Well, I didn’t work with her; I haven’t even seen her. I worked with Ed Begley Jr., Mike Hitchcock and Parker Posey, so I didn’t even get to see her. I can’t wait to see her at the premiere.

What do you remember from working with Jennifer on “Best in Show”?

It was a first-time experience for both of us, and we were both very nervous. We were shooting it in Vancouver and we got very close. The days we weren’t working we would take walks through Stanley Park, and she is one of those people who can make me laugh so hard that I can’t catch my breath. She renders my mind inert. I can’t do anything but hold whatever spot I’m at and just double over and try to catch my breath.

Has there ever been a role you regretted not taking?

I can’t even think of one. I’m so in the moment, man. I don’t think about that stuff. I can’t even remember turning something down and I can’t even remember – I don’t remember most things. (laughs)
Editor's Pick

Looking to limber up and get in shape for the summer? Ann Arbor’s “Naked Men’s Yoga” is an opportunity for area LGBTQ men to get in shape in a fun environment – sans clothes.

The hour-long sessions consist of yoga postures and conclude with a relaxing five to 10 minute meditation period. Yoga helps with strength, balance, flexibility, stamina, concentration and body alignment. The men that attend have similar interests in exercise, injury prevention and health. The yoga poses the class does are appropriate for beginners and those new to yoga, as well as for experienced practitioners.

The clothing optional class meets from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Saturdays in Ann Arbor. For location and more information, contact Dave at massage4@aol.com or visit https://groups.yahoo.com/neo/michigan_mens_clothing_optional_yoga/.

---

Art 'N' Around

Step On Bus Tours “Detroit Zombie Armageddon” $10 donation with portion of the proceeds to benefit two local groups in their fight against cancer! The Tanger Gallery, 715 E. Jefferson, Detroit. Transparency, 2:00 - 2:45 p.m. ¥20, $15 students and groups of 10. www.steponbustours.com/home.html

---

Shows

The Trouble with Harry Join us for the Michigan debut of The Trouble with Harry a play based on the Alfred Hitchcock classic! The trouble with Harry is that he's dead. Four small town inhabitants need to work together quickly to deal with being suspects in Harry's death before the Deputy Sheriff catches on to the potential crime. This comedy is full of surprises and dry humour.

Royal Oak Theatre 2529 Elizabeth Lake Road, Waterford, April 22, April 23, April 24, April 25, April 26, April 27, April 28, April 29, April 30, May 1, May 2, May 3, May 4, May 5, May 6, May 7, May 8. 248-277-7400. www.monsterboxtheatre.com
BTL Pet of the Week - Koi

Say hi to Koi! This 1-year-old domestic short hair is a very affectionate fellow. He’s the curious type that loves to explore but he’s sure to not stray too far from your lap. The adoption fee includes sterilization, age-appropriate vaccinations, the MHS Adoption Guarantee and much more. For more information, visit or call the MHS Detroit Center for Animal Care at (313) 872-3400 and provide the pet ID number, 825466.

Classifieds

201 REAL ESTATE - REAL ESTATE AGENTS

- Instant FREE access to Michigan and the Nation’s Top Gay & Lesbian Realtors.
- Free Buyers Representation, Free Sellers Market Analysis - Free Relocation Kit!
- On line: WWW.GAYREALESTATE.COM or Toll Free 1-888-420-MOVE (6683)

350 PETS - PETS

- ENGLISH BULLDOGS
  - MALE AND FEMALE ENGLISH BULLDOG READY TO GIVE AWAY (FREE FOR ADOPTION)
  - CONTACT ME FOR MORE INFORMATION: GREMORE34@GMAIL.COM

301 EMPLOYMENT - GENERAL

- MUST LOVE DOGS!!
  - Happy Hounds Dog Day Care is now hiring part-time hourly dog lovers. Please call or stop in to fill out application.
  - 734.459.DOGS
  - 673 South Main St.
  - Plymouth, MI 48170

- CARING DRIVERS WANTED
  - Transport people to prescheduled medical appointments in Wayne County and beyond. Must have reliable 4-door vehicle, cell phone, and access to email or fax. Great way to supplement social security, disability or a pension income.
  - (989) 738-8671
  - Dale@drstephaniewilliams.net
  - www.plymouthpsychologist.com

408 PROF. SERVICES - COUNSELING

- Psychotherapy
  - Sliding fee/No fee
  - Dale Rogalski
  - Masters Candidate
  - Supervised by Dr. Stephanie Williams, Ph.D.
  - Offices in Pleasant Ridge, 9 1/2 Mile & Woodward, and Plymouth
  - 248-658-8791
  - 248-259-1991
  - www.plymouthpsychologist.com

428 PROF. SERVICES - MASSAGE

- Licensed Swedish
  - Auburn Hills
  - Kansonn
  - 248-672-0669
  - kansonn@yahoo.com

- MASSAGE
  - Call Lee 248-548-6516

- 1-888-MegaMates
  - FIND REAL GAY MEN NEAR YOU
  - (313) 962-5000
  - www.megamates.com 16+

Resource

Please be sure to check out our special pet guide online @ www.pride-source.com

It provides great articles and resources throughout the year that help you care for your pet!

BTL Pet of the Week - Koi

Say hi to Koi! This 1-year-old domestic short hair is a very affectionate fellow. He’s the curious type that loves to explore but he’s sure to not stray too far from your lap. The adoption fee includes sterilization, age-appropriate vaccinations, the MHS Adoption Guarantee and much more. For more information, visit or call the MHS Detroit Center for Animal Care at (313) 872-3400 and provide the pet ID number, 825466.
Deep Inside Hollywood

BY ROMEO SAN VICENTE

How many Billie Jean King movies, again?

This is how it goes in Hollywood: a good idea spawns copycat ideas. Sometimes, these good ideas become competing projects rushing to beat each other into theaters or on to television. It’s why there were two Truman Capote movies, why another “Jungle Book” movie is coming soon, and why there are (or were, depending on how much you trust the expression “in development”) three movies about the legendary 1973 tennis match between Bobby Riggs and Billie Jean King. We’ll skip the two that may or may not be actually happening now – that would be the one with Will Ferrell attached as Riggs, and the one with Paul Giamatti and Elizabeth Banks, neither of which have been making much noise of late – and focus on the one that’s actually shooting. That would be “Battle of the Sexes,” which stars Emma Stone as King, Steve Carell as Riggs, and comes from the creative team of screenwriter Simon Beaufoy (“Slumdog Millionaire”), and co-directors Jonathan Dayton and Valerie Faris (“Little Miss Sunshine”). The period comedy has a newsworthy supporting cast, too, with Elisabeth Shue, Alan Cumming and Sarah Silverman rounding out the ’70s vibe. May it remind everyone who watches it how truly resistant American culture was to the mainstreaming of feminism, and how much more work there is to be done.

‘Jurassic World’ sequel gets J.A. Bayona

The “Jurassic Park” franchise, resurrected in form and money-minting function last summer, has its next director, and his name is J.A. Bayona. No worries if you’ve never heard of him. He’s the gay, Spanish filmmaker responsible for the tsunami drama “The Impossible” and the thriller “The Orphanage.” Assuming that the disaster-effects-heavy “Impossible” was sufficient-enough calling card to take on the disaster-effects-heavy world of carnivorous dinosaurs, he’ll be stepping in for the departing Colin Trevorrow. Why, you may ask, is former indie director Trevorrow not returning to the money-minting franchise? Well, he’s going to be busy with a new “Star Wars” installment, that’s why. Cast members Chris Pratt and Bryce Dallas Howard are scheduled to return – with salary hikes, it’s assumed, considering the first one pulled in $1.7 billion worldwide – and the film’s tentative release date is 2018. So, for those of you keeping score, the new paradigm is that you can be gay and get hired to direct a chapter in a blockbuster franchise. Now let’s see how long it takes for someone to hire a woman to make one.

Elle Fanning and Jena Malone do the love scene thing in ‘Neon Demon’

Elle Fanning is an adult now. And the first thing young actors usually do when they turn 18 is run directly to those grown-up roles. Ms. Fanning also happens to be well-regarded in her chosen profession, so it’s no surprise that for one of her first post-childhood projects, she landed herself in the latest movie from acclaimed Danish director Nicholas Winding Refn (“Drive”). It’s called “The Neon Demon,” and it’s soon to premiere at the Cannes Film Festival. It co-stars Christina Hendricks, Keana Reeves and Jena Malone (with whom Fanning has a lesbian love scene). A stylized horror film of sorts, the plot seems to involve a young woman with aspirations to becoming a model, only to find herself surrounded by people who want to devour her youth and beauty like a pack of vampires. In other words, it’s a story about the day-in-day-out world of the entertainment industry. The art-minded thriller opens in general release in June, just in time for its star to consider living arrangements for her first semester in college. Suggestion, speaking of horror: not the dorms.

From Zero to I Love You reunites “Noah’s Arc” cast

Do you miss “Noah’s Arc”? You probably do. Because, frankly, it’s not like anyone in the world of basic cable was lining up to make television programs about the lives of gay black men before it arrived. And furthermore, how many have there been since? Exactly. So when former “Arc”-er Doug Spearman directed his first feature, the LGBT film festival favorite “Hot Guys with Guns,” it gave us hope for more to come. Well, now something new “is” coming. Spearman’s latest directorial effort, “From Zero to I Love You,” will tell the story of a gay man (played by “Noah’s Arc” alum Darryl Stephens) who rejects his friends’ and family’s effort to set him up with Mr. Right, all because he can’t resist the thrill of chasing heterosexual men – the kind with wives. Yes, yes, yes, the gay shame of it all, but still a fascinating idea for a story in a world where gay culture is beating the drum for everybody settling down and getting adorably married. Why not a romance about wanting, and possibly getting, the one you can’t have? More on this one as it slowly winds its way to release.

Always Something happening at the \aut\ BAR
Weekly Events and Specials

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Day</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tuesday</td>
<td>Karaoke and 1/2 off wine</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wednesday</td>
<td>$1 off beer and free pool</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thursday</td>
<td>Trivia with Terry and Thirsty Thursday 1/2 off beer and well drinks with Student ID</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Friday</td>
<td>Bistro Fridays Special menu a la carte, or prix fixe 4-course meal for $20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Saturday</td>
<td>turnT \aut\ club night at the \aut\ BAR Progressive Drink specials</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sunday</td>
<td>Salsa Night $1 tacos Salsa lessons</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

35th annual fine art fair may 7 & 8, 2016
www.ArtBirmingham.org

In Downtown Birmingham’s Shain Park

Produced by the ArtCenter in association with The Guild
With special thanks to

www.PrideSource.com
Across
1  “Mamma Mia!” band
5 Acted like
9 Prefix with sexual
14 Susan Feniger preparation
15 Irene of “Fame”
16 Illicit love affair
17 Problem for skin
18 Send tumbling
19 ’69 disturbances at Stonewall
20 Ed O’Neill’s character on “Modern Family”
“Modern Family”
23 Marlon Brando’s hometown
24 Fran Drescher show, with “The”
25 Sound of Scarecrow’s foe
28 Stimpy’s pal
29 U-turn from NNW
31 Sometimes pierced flap
33 Funny Cheri
35 Tops a cupcake
36 Mitchell’s pet snake that 20-Across “murdered”
40 Boat bottom
42 Mullally of “Will & Grace”
43 Communicating regularly
47 Dick, for short
48 They made laws against O. Wilde’s life
51 1950 film noir
52 Male deliveries?
54 Layer at Hamburger Mary’s
56 Mitchell’s pet bird that 20-Across “murdered”
58 “…a ___ deferred” (Hughes)
61 Ball of film
62 Illegal block by Esera Tuaola
63 Greek triangle
64 Pink on the inside
65 Windy day toy
66 A turnstile swallows it
67 Boob
68 Takes advantage of pupils?

Down
1 Scale with three sharps
2 Turned into
3 “South Pacific” tree
4 Alpha, to the circumcized
5 Beginning of “Hairspray”
6 Wife and wife, e.g.
7 Susan in “All My Children”
8 Moon over the Niles?
9 Saint Joan or Saint Sebastian
10 Send off
11 When repeated, campy
12 Wheel track
13 Areas for Dr. Kerry Weaver
14 Mitchell’s pet bird that 20-Across “murdered”
15 Irene of “Fame”
16 Illicit love affair
17 Problem for skin
18 Send tumbling
19 ’69 disturbances at Stonewall
20 Ed O’Neill’s character on “Modern Family”
“Modern Family”
23 Marlon Brando’s hometown
24 Fran Drescher show, with “The”
25 Sound of Scarecrow’s foe
28 Stimpy’s pal
29 U-turn from NNW
31 Sometimes pierced flap
33 Funny Cheri
35 Tops a cupcake
36 Mitchell’s pet snake that 20-Across “murdered”
40 Boat bottom
42 Mullally of “Will & Grace”
43 Communicating regularly
47 Dick, for short
48 They made laws against O. Wilde’s life
51 1950 film noir
52 Male deliveries?
54 Layer at Hamburger Mary’s
56 Mitchell’s pet bird that 20-Across “murdered”
58 “…a ___ deferred” (Hughes)
61 Ball of film
62 Illegal block by Esera Tuaola
63 Greek triangle
64 Pink on the inside
65 Windy day toy
66 A turnstile swallows it
67 Boob
68 Takes advantage of pupils?

Marriages Since 1968!
Plan your special day with us.

Senior Pastor Rev. Roland Stringfellow
Associate Pastor Rev. Deb Dyserl

Sunday School 9:15 a.m.
Sunday Worship 11 a.m.
Children’s Ministry 11 a.m.
2441 Pinecrest Ferndale, MI
248-399-7741 www.mccdetroit.org

Whosoever Ministry
Rev. Dr. Valma Whissey
FOUNDER & PASTOR

Sundays at 11:00
2930 Woodward Ave.
Detroit, MI 48201
313.239.0000
WWW.WHOSOVERMINISTRY.ORG

Find solution to this puzzle at www.pridesource.com

Q Puzzle

Pet Murderer

26 Prez linked with Joshua Speed
27 Bentley of “American Beauty”
30 Remarks, slangily
32 Pride member
33 Northern capital
34 Descartes’s conclusion
36 “Chicago”’s Catherine
37 Use your head
38 Well-kept secret, for some
39 Painter Francis
40 Dan Savage memoir, with “The”
41 Bowie collaborator
44 Tracey of “Tracey Takes On”
45 Queerly shy
46 Sand or water, to Sheehan
48 Broadway’s “Thoroughly modern” woman
49 Like Miss Manners
50 Wesley of “To Wong Foo, Thanks For Everything! Julie Newmar”
53 Start of a religious title
55 Head attachments
56 It has a fickle finger
57 Don Juan’s mother
58 It can kill the queen of a colony
59 Vintage vehicle
60 “Horny” animal

Find solution to this puzzle at www.pridesource.com
UNIFYING FOR EQUALITY
JUNE 11 & 12, 2016
HART PLAZA • DETROIT

#WINNING EQUALITY #DEFENDING EQUALITY #MORE THAN MARRIAGE

Motor City Pride is sponsored by the following companies that support our goal to build an inclusive community that is free of violence, intimidation and discrimination.

Current sponsors include: Delta Air Lines, UAW-Ford, FIAT Brand, MotorCity Casino Hotel, MGM Grand Detroit, Fifth Third Bank, General Motors, Comerica Bank, Great Lakes Distributing, Menjo’s, UHY LLP, Inferno, TD Auto Finance, Zipcar, Pride Source Media, Metra Magazine, and AMP Radio.

MOTORCITYPRIDE.ORG $5 COVER
Detroit Public Health
STD Clinic
Open
On the corner of Woodward and Canfield.
Monday–Friday 8 a.m.–4 p.m.

- STD and HIV testing and treatment
- Walk-ins welcome
- Most insurances accepted
- Financial assistance available

313-577-9100

Michigan.gov/HIVSTD
Hosted by Wayne State University Physician Group