When Salvation Army Founder William Booth was promoted to Glory in 1912, The Salvation Army had already opened its first 46 countries in 1947 years of existence. Its early growth has barely slowed and today, a century later, the movement has grown to 125 countries, with the most recent opening in Greenland – officially recognised on 8 August.