Vernacular Farmhouse. Wood frame set on stone and beam foundation; L-shape (32' x 24') with extensions; 3 bays wide; 2½-stories, clapboard siding; wood shake gable roof with small side gables on west, south facades; center entrance on north facade; corbelled and center interior end chimneys.
Exterior features include 1/1, 6/1, 6/6 double-hung sash; single pane fixed sash; flat-roofed porch on north facade supported by simple narrow open post columns with molded capitals and bases; 4-panel door with half sidelights and panels below; 2 small shed-roofed porches on west and south facades; plain frieze board; corner boards; boxed cornice. Notable landscape features include large stone gate posts; wrought-iron bed frame for gate; out door V-shaped cement trough; large old trees; 3 wood frame gable-roofed outbuildings; 1 wood frame gambrel-roofed barn with cupola.
1995: Bern burned down c. 1992; One contributing building; three contributing structures. John M. Crockett built this large farmhouse in 1858 on a 318 acre Donation Claim which he filed on March 6, 1866. After his death, his wife Ann remarried Dr. Joshua Highwarden. They resided here until they sold to Thomas W. Calhoun in February 1888. Calhoun remained until 1898 when he sold to Charles (Carl) Engle. Charles Engle built the gambrel-roofed barn adjacent to the house in 1909, as well as the milk barn, grainery and machine outbuildings. In 1916, Engle constructed the large stone gate posts using woven wire fencing. He also constructed the cement sewage trough running from the house into the field. A new roof was put on in 1950. The ownership moved from Charles Engle to his daughters, and then to their

SIGNIFICANCE This property is significant under National Register criterion A, for its association with early Euroamerican settlement in the Pacific Northwest and the Donation Land Claim Laws, in the period between 1850 and 1870. This property is also significant under National Register criterion A, for its association with agricultural land use patterns first established during the period of early settlement in the 1850s. This property is also significant under National Register criterion C, because it embodies the distinctive characteristics of architectural expressions and methods of construction that represent the period of early Euroamerican settlement in the Reserve beginning in the 1850s through 1870. It retains integrity of location, setting, materials, design, workmanship, feeling and association.
