The culmination of the project will include a synopsis of the views of parents and service providers for youths with autism who are beginning or have completed the transition out of high school. There are vast differences in the opinions of the individuals who have been interviewed across the different counties of Vermont. At the Castleton Scholars celebration, I will be introducing the statements from individuals who have participated in the research as a reflection of the differences of perceptions that come from these different perspectives. The systems that have been examined include the school system, the mental health system, and the criminal justice system. I have found so far that there are many different experiences both positive and negative, and much of that depends of the level of involvement of the parents.
