When I first entered college and had the divine pleasure of experiencing campus life, I learned the true meaning of “Don’t judge a book by its cover.” Appearances meant nothing as I chose people to have conversations and experiences with, as their personalities differed more than any combination of visual looks could. As I think others are too quick to judge, an open mind is most necessary when attending college and should be one of our most important qualities. Each person is protagonist to their own life, and I wanted to able to express that visually. My photographic series is meant to portray the story behind each person that you don’t come to find out until you read deeper.
