

Atelier Gargoyle Flexible Sealing Wax is composed of natural resins, beeswax, synthetic polymers, pigments for color and essential oils for scent. The synthetic polymers give the wax toughness, tenacity, flexibility and survivability.

You can confidently use Atelier Gargoyle Flexible Sealing Wax on correspondence that will go through today’s automated and mechanized postal systems. This sealing wax will survive with minimal cracking or breakage. We like to tell people that “Atelier Gargoyle Sealing Wax is bulletproof, and almost Post Office Proof!”

A bit of history:

Ward Dunham & Linnea Lindquist started experimenting with making their own sealing wax in the early 1990s. They’ve tested it on their personal correspondence since then, and they started selling it to the public in 2003. The wax is made personally by Ward & Linnea in their San Francisco atelier. They mix small batches and pour the wax into special molds from which individual sticks are removed and trimmed while still warm but no longer molten. The wax comes in a rainbow of colors, and is sized for convenience of use. Noted herbalist Jeanne Rose was consulted to find the right essential oils to scent the wax; which include cassia, nutmeg, clove bud, litsea cubeba, lavender, vetiver, and pine. The wax sticks bear a calligraphic rendering (done by Ward) of their business name (Atelier Gargoyle), along with the alchemical symbols for wax and spirits of alcohol.

Each stick weighs approx 5/8 oz or 18 grams, and is a tad short of 6 inches long. Each stick will make about 10–20 seal impressions, depending on the size of the seal.

The price is $6 per stick.

JNB stocks some of the colors but will be glad to special order other colors. Please contact us for info and lead time.
