

A New "Golden Era" of Public Service?

David E. Frulla

September 1, 2009

The article discussed the cycles of growth and decline in the federal workforce over the past century, how presidents impact the macro public service trends and the "new era" of professional public service under the Obama administration. The article also examined the current administration's focus on enhancing the government's regulatory and oversight capabilities.