

Catherine Cayce

Special Counsel

ccayce@kelleydrye.com

Washington, DC
(202) 342-8425

About

Catherine Cayce has over 15 years of law firm and in-house counsel experience, and she focuses on ensuring that clients understand and comply with U.S. export regulations, including the Export Administration Regulations (EAR), the International Traffic in Arms Regulations (ITAR), and Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) regulations. She has extensive experience helping clients build, implement, and maintain robust and practical export control programs. She also conducts internal investigations, prepares voluntary disclosures and government filings, and provides clients with hands-on advice on a wide variety of export compliance and sanctions issues.

Prior to private practice, Catherine served as senior counsel for international trade compliance at several global companies. She has led and managed teams responsible for global trade compliance policy development and roll-out, training, communication, investigations and disclosures, and export compliance due diligence in mergers and acquisitions.

Experience

Representing a large EU company on complex multi-jurisdictional export controls and sanctions matters, including export compliance program and process development as well as discrete complex matters and analyses.

Representing a world-leading provider of aircraft engines, as well as integrated systems for commercial, military, business, and general aviation in a range of export control matters.

Represent large global industrial manufacturer in range of export control matters.

Represent a U.S. technology solutions provider in a range of export control matters.

Represent an international developer of fluid system products in a range of export control matters.

Related Services

Export Controls and Economic Sanctions
International Trade

Education

William & Mary Law School, J.D., 2008

Georgetown University, B.A., 2004

Admissions

District of Columbia, 2010

Virginia, 2008