About

An experienced litigator, Dan concentrates his practice representing government entities in high-impact litigation to protect public health, safety, and the environment.

Combining his complex litigation experience working as both a government attorney and private practitioner, Dan represents public and private sector clients in environmental litigation. These actions seek natural resource damages and treatment of contaminated drinking water supplies. A substantial portion of these cases concern per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) environmental contamination.

Prior to joining the firm, Dan worked for an international law firm representing individuals in mass tort and personal injury actions, including those harmed by dangerous pharmaceuticals, defective medical devices, toxic pollution, and consumer fraud.

Dan also previously acted as a Deputy Attorney General in the New Jersey Attorney General's Office where he primarily focused on prosecuting polluters as a member of the Environmental Enforcement and Environmental Justice section. There, he successfully litigated and resolved several complex matters brought on behalf of the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection against various corporations responsible for contamination. He specifically handled several high-profile matters as part of the Attorney General's natural resource damages, cost recovery, and environmental justice initiatives, including cases involving widespread PFAS contamination.

Dan began his legal career in the Philadelphia District Attorney's Office as a paralegal throughout law school and as an Assistant District Attorney responsible for prosecuting individuals charged with committing various felonies and misdemeanors in Northwest Philadelphia.

valued at $2 billion in remediation, restoration, costs, and damages. On the eve of this trial, 3M settled-out for up to $450 million more in PFAS damages to New Jersey.
