

From Subpoenas to Search Warrants: Dealing with Federal Agents and Prosecutors

November 30, 2020

No employer wants to hear that a government agency has unexpectedly shown up on premises or served notice for an on-site visit to review records and interview employees. Still, businesses should have policies and procedures in place – from preparing staff and handling initial inquiries to knowing their rights and obligations – and review these steps with employees well in advance of any investigation.

In this session, our attorneys will discuss search warrants, subpoenas and government interviews, as well as review best practices for dealing with federal agents and prosecutors.