About

James Saylor has managed complex litigations and arbitration for a diverse breadth of firm clients, including national brick and mortar and online retailers, internationally-recognized brands, tech startups, entertainment companies, and international contractors, among many others.

A substantial portion of James' practice involves the defense of consumer class actions under various state and federal laws regulating deceptive trade practices and telemarketing. James has provided counseling to major corporations facing issues in advertising and represented such corporations before private regulatory bodies.

James has provided solutions that have led to favorable outcomes for firm clients at all stages of the adversarial process from informal dispute resolution and early motion practice to discovery, class decertification, summary judgment, trial, and appeal.

Experience

Litigation
