

Kelley Drye Advertising and Privacy Groups Launch New Podcast Now Available in iTunes

May 20, 2019

Kelley Drye & Warren announced today the launch of the Ad Law Access podcast – a new podcast from its advertising and privacy groups. Hosted by Kelley Drye attorneys, including Christie Grymes Thompson, Alysa Hutnik, John Villafranco, Gonzalo Mon, and Kristi Wolff, the podcast provides updates on advertising and policy law trends, issues, and developments.

“Our goal is to provide listeners with high-level, insightful analysis on the major issues in consumer protection law as they develop,” said Christie Thompson, chair of the advertising and marketing practice. “We have structured these as shorter episodes – perfect for a morning or evening commute or lunch break – to give people digestible information that they can easily apply.”

Currently, listeners can find podcast episodes on topics such as the California Consumer Privacy Act \(CCPA\), influencer marketing, challenging competitors’ claims, and GDPR, among others. New episodes will be announced at AdLawAccess.com; the Ad Law Access podcast is available now through Apple’s iTunes, Spotify, Google Podcasts, SoundCloud, and soon through other podcast services.