

Kelley Drye's Stainless Steel Bar Clients Score Major ITC Victory in Sunset Reviews

December 30, 2006

International trade attorneys at Kelley Drye helped domestic manufacturers of stainless steel bar achieve a significant win at the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC).

Commissioners reaffirmed the existing antidumping duty orders on stainless steel bar from India, Brazil, Japan, and Spain in order to prevent the likely recurrence of material injury to the U.S. industry.

Kelley Drye represented Carpenter Technology Corporation, Crucible Specialty Metals, Dunkirk Specialty Steel, LLC, Electralloy Corp., North American Stainless, Outokumpu Stainless, Inc., and Valbruna Slater Stainless, Inc. in the case.

"The antidumping orders have ensured fair trade in the industry since they were first issued in 1995," said Kelley Drye's lead attorney in the case. "This is a crucial win and helps ensure the ongoing competitiveness of American producers."

ITC commissioners voted unanimously to continue the antidumping orders against Indian and Japanese imports and voted 4-2 to continue the orders against stainless steel bar from Brazil and Spain. The orders will remain in place for 5 years.

Partner Larry Lasoff and Associate Grace Kim assisted in the case. Brad Hudgens of Georgetown Economic Services served as lead economist in the case.