August 7, 2017

Kelley Drye is pleased to announce that senior associate Brooke Ringel has been honored by Law360 as one of the "Rising Stars" in international trade law for 2017, which recognizes top legal talent across the United States under the age of 40.

As one of four international trade attorneys honored, Brooke was selected for working as the lead associate on steel investigations at the International Trade Commission and as the lead attorney on countervailing duty investigations at the Department of Commerce.

Brooke and other international trade attorneys at Kelley Drye mostly defend US producers facing unfair imports. "We bring cases on their behalf and defend current trade orders so that they can continue manufacturing in the United States," she said. "There's a really defined benefit to the work that we do, and it helps domestic producers stay in business in the United States."

156 attorneys made the Law360 Rising Stars Under 40 list out of a pool of more than 1,200 nominees this year.
