About

With invaluable insight honed during her years of government service, Melissa Brewer focuses on international trade issues, helping her clients navigate the decision-making processes involved in trade cases.

In this capacity, Melissa represents domestic industries in U.S. antidumping and countervailing duty proceedings against unfairly priced and subsidized foreign imports.

She practices before the U.S. Department of Commerce, U.S. International Trade Commission, Office of the United States Trade Representative, and she has appeared before the U.S. Court of International Trade and U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Melissa has represented clients in proceedings before U.S. Customs and Border Protection, including requests for classification of goods and rulings pertaining to the country of origin of imported merchandise. She also counsels clients on issues pertaining to various free trade agreements and the agreements of the World Trade Organization.

Prior to joining Kelley Drye, Melissa served as an attorney advisor to the Office of the Chief Counsel for Trade Enforcement and Compliance at the United States Department of Commerce. She drafted petitions, motions, briefs, and other written submissions in cases before the Court of International Trade, the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, and the WTO Dispute Settlement Body.

Melissa works extensively on the domestic implementation of WTO decisions pursuant to Sections 123 and 129 of the Uruguay Round Agreements Act. Melissa advises department officials on administrative law, judicial precedent, agency regulations and practice, and customs liquidation issues in antidumping and countervailing duty investigations, reviews, and other administrative proceedings.

Melissa has experience dealing with matters concerning foreign trade zones, the regulatory rulemaking process, and proceedings concerning scope and circumvention of antidumping and countervailing duty orders.
