About

There is a story behind every patent, trademark, and copyright. Telling that story persuasively, strategically, and in a way that resonates with adjudicators and other decision-makers has facilitated Michael Zinna's success as an IP litigator and counselor.

Particularly accomplished on patent matters and disputes, but equally adept with all other IP matters, Mike thrives operating within the creative and innovative space that is intellectual property law, and he enjoys helping each client realize their specific vision for their company and brand.

Clients appreciate Mike's ability to take IP assets from concept to market, his vigilance in protecting them, his aptitude for maximizing their value, and his effective advocacy when asserting clients' rights in contested proceedings or defending clients against allegations of infringement by third parties.

Mike's experience includes complex patent litigation, patent licensing, due diligence, patent clearance, design around strategies, and managing domestic and international patent portfolios. He litigates IP cases in federal courts around the country.

Mike also represents patent holders and challengers in post-grant review proceedings before the U.S. Patent Trial and Appeal Board. His ability to take complex technical concepts and translate them into compelling and understandable narratives provides his clients with strategic advantages in litigation, during prosecution, and beyond.

Michael is known for his ability to litigate efficiently without sacrificing strategic objectives. In addition to his patent docket, Mike brings his robust advocacy skills to trademark, trade dress, copyright, and unfair competition litigation. He advises clients on branding strategy, evaluates trademark searches, and procures trademarks domestically and internationally. Mike's trademark experience also includes opposition and cancellation proceedings before the U.S. Trademark Trial and Appeal Board. In addition, he attends to U.S. copyright filings and drafts IP-related agreements.

Clients from a wide range of industries rely on Mike's counsel, including media and entertainment, medical devices, fashion, luxury goods, beauty, consumer products, transportation and logistics, energy, and hospitality. He also has extensive experience negotiating against patent non-practicing entities (NPEs).

A frequent and well-received speaker before trade associations, clients, and industry groups on intellectual property issues, Mike is also an authority on how to handle complex litigation efficiently—he is the author of “Techniques for Expediting and Streamlining Litigation” in Thomson-Reuter’s Business and Commercial Litigation in Federal Courts.
