

Partner Alysa Hutnik Quoted in Wall Street Journal Article on CCPA Regulations

September 17, 2019

Partner Alysa Hutnik was quoted in the Wall Street Journal article "California Lawmakers Pass Only Minor Changes to Privacy Measure." On September 13, 2019, California legislators adjourned for the year, notably without watering down the sweeping CCPA privacy law set to take effect in January, although they passed a handful of amendments intended to clarify parts of the legislation. Many privacy advocacy groups as well as corporations were frustrated by the lack of clarification.

"Companies have to come to peace with things not being clear and this not being a perfect statute," said Alysa in response.
