About

After more than 35 years of practice focused on U.S. trade remedy counseling and litigation, particularly under the antidumping and countervailing duty laws, Alan Luberda recognizes that effective counsel requires more than a comprehensive knowledge of the laws that govern international trade. To help his clients gain and maintain a competitive advantage, Alan immerses himself in the details of the businesses at the center of his efforts. He learns the product characteristics, production processes, sales and marketing, market dynamics and business goals of the clients he serves. This approach enables him to craft compelling narratives that consistently lead to favorable results in contested matters, achieve successful advocacy in trade policy, and offer actionable guidance in navigating governmental investigations and enforcement actions.

Alan's clients encompass a wide range of industries including base metals, industrial equipment, consumer goods, agricultural and chemical products. He represents businesses – from large multinational corporations to family-owned enterprises – as well as ad hoc coalitions and industry and trade associations, in international trade matters before the Department of Commerce, the U.S. International Trade Commission, the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, the U.S. Department of State, the Department of Homeland Security (including Customs and Border Protection) and the U.S. Congress.

Alan handles matters involving antidumping, countervailing duty and safeguard, export control, and customs laws, earning a reputation for both his comprehensive substantive knowledge of the law and his appreciation of the complex financial, logistical, and operational realities involved in moving goods around the globe, including primary metals, chemicals, industrial and consumer products, energy infrastructure equipment, agricultural goods, and other products. His first-chair litigation experience and record of successful resolutions extend beyond administrative and regulatory bodies to matters before the Court of International Trade, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, and other federal courts.

Alan was former chair of the firm's International Trade practice and former Managing Partner of the firm's Washington, D.C., office.
