The election is over and President-elect Trump has indicated his choices for Cabinet positions, including Andrew Puzder as Secretary of Labor, providing a window into the direction that the incoming administration is moving. Appointments to the NLRB and EEOC will follow. While there are not yet any changes to legislation, administrative regulations, or Executive orders, it is clear that the landscape of labor and employment law could look very different in the near future. Join attorneys Irwin Bluestein, Meyer, Suozzi, English & Klein, P.C.; Anne L. Clark, Vladeck, Raskin & Clark, P.C.; and partners Barbara E. Hoey and Mark A. Konkell, Kelley Drye & Warren LLP, for a discussion about changes to expect in the next administration and their impact on the workplace.
