

The Washington Post Features Kelley Drye Employee, Alicia Hunter

June 17, 2016

Alicia Hunter, assistant to Kelley Drye's former managing partner Lew Rose, was featured in the Washington Post article "These employees are willing to do just a little bit more." The article focuses on employees "who are willing to go above and beyond their daily roles." Ms. Hunter is recognized as the founder and director of Kelley Drye's holiday choir – just one of the many things the firm does to make the Washington, DC office a great place to work.

To read the full article, please click here.