The death of union representation was probably not exaggerated—that is, before the pandemic. Now, with employers desperate to recruit and retain employees in a robust labor market, wages seeing the highest percentage increases in years, and a sense of worker-side empowerment not seen for years, unions are more powerful and relevant than at any time in decades.

This webinar covers:

- The resurgence in union activity across all industries, including strikes and organizing activity
- Changes at the NLRB
- Taking the temperature of your workforce
- Strategies to mitigate union-related risks and disruptions to your business
