Lehman’s in Kidron, OH is home to the only Museum of Light in the country. Thanks to the avid collectors the Knights of Aladdin, the museum boasts rare salesman samples, as well as a complete history of the iconic brand. Founded in the early 1900s, Aladdin introduced the first mantle (incandescent burner), that burned brighter and hotter than any other lamp on the market. Which meant you no longer had to go to bed when the sun went down, because now you had a bright interior light source.

Galen Lehman, son of founder Jay Lehman and CEO

“An Aladdin lamp is the one lamp to have in a disaster. It burns with a bright, white, “electric-like” light, thanks to its incandescent mantle. It uses less fuel than any other wick lamp while producing about six times more light. It’s totally silent and requires no complicated pumping. And, when you couple it with our exclusive three-year parts kit, it means you have a lamp that will be ready when you need it. I have three Aladdin Lamps in my home, including a Genie (which is the best value of any Aladdin lamp).”
