

“After primary school I decided to learn pottery as my trade, because most elders were proud of their pottery skill and could earn a living from it. I am now a master potter living independently. I have been able to construct a three-room house for myself and I assist my parents with paying their medical bills. I also pay school fees for my younger brothers and sisters who are in secondary school, for I would like to see them go further in their education than I did.”

-Nyimeh Elvis, Prescraft, Cameroon